From the General Director

Welcome to Lyric Opera! I'm delighted that you're joining us for our opening production of 2015-16, and I look forward to seeing you throughout the season.

I'm sure that after experiencing this performance, you'll agree with me that Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro is one of the most sublimely beautiful and gloriously entertaining operas ever written. It deals with all of life in a way that is both deeply touching and incredibly witty. It has something for everyone, and it's genuinely profound in its understanding of human nature and human relationships. It's also uniquely funny, lively, and accessible, with heartstopping melodies and amazing ensembles.

Typical of Figaro is one of my favorite sections of the opera, which occurs midway in Act Three. It's a brief duet (less than three minutes) between our two leading ladies, the Countess and Susanna. During this duet the two soprano voices intertwine absolutely magically, and the effect is wonderfully touching. Listen for it during this performance – I'm sure you'll be enraptured by it, as I am every time I hear it.

This opera is an evergreen masterpiece that stays with you all your life. I still remember hearing my first Figaro performances more than 40 years ago at both of the major London opera companies. After producing Figaro at both Welsh National Opera and Houston Grand Opera, it is a special pleasure for me to introduce a brand-new production here at Lyric.

Directing our production is Barbara Gaines, the distinguished and long-serving artistic director of the Chicago Shakespeare Theater. I got to know Barbara's work when I arrived in Chicago four years ago, and have greatly enjoyed many of her productions. I believe Figaro is the perfect opera for her. I love her approach to the piece; we're in an 18th-century world, but that world is not entirely naturalistic – it's a fantasy 18th-century world, both funny and frivolous, very physical, and very sexy! The 18th-century costumes are lavishly beautiful, and wonderfully over the top. Humor, physicality, and sex appeal are three qualities that Barbara is determined to draw from our youthful cast (headed by two remarkable couples – Adam Plachetka and Christiane Karg, Amanda Majeski and Luca Pisaroni). You can expect all our artists onstage to give spellbinding performances, revealing their characters in depth in the course of a riveting, hugely entertaining evening.

On the podium I'm delighted to welcome to Lyric for the first time a brilliant young Hungarian conductor, Henrik Nánási, music director of Berlin's Komische Oper. He is a great Mozartian, and I know he and Barbara Gaines will work wonderfully together because they share the same vision for this piece. Henrik's conducting is energized, sparkling, full of vitality, and those are qualities that will be typical of Barbara's production.

I hope you will be as excited by our new Marriage of Figaro as we are in presenting it to you. If you're new to this art form, I can anticipate that the production will blow away any preconceptions you might have about opera. And if you're coming to this work having known it well for your entire operagoing life, you can expect to be as captivated by Lyric's production as you were when you saw Figaro for the very first time.

From the President

I'm thrilled to begin my tenure as President of Lyric Opera for many reasons, but above all, because opera has become a vital element of my life, both personally and professionally. In the early 1990s, when my company was about five years old, I realized that in the marketing world you took clients to a Bulls Game, or to Wrigley Field – there was a customary set of entertainment venues. But rather than a sports outing, what if we treated them to the opera? We began bringing clients, for whom it was unique and unforgettable, introducing them to an art form they'd heard about but never experienced. For me, it checked the boxes on the business side, but it also nurtured in me an enduring love for opera. I'd grown up in New Jersey listening to WQXR, hearing the Met on the radio, but becoming a subscriber and enjoying opera in the theater was brand new to me.

It's been my great pleasure to be a Lyric subscriber since 1992. I feel a special excitement every opening night, and when I return to a production a second or third time, I always see things I hadn't seen before. My wife and I continue to introduce people to Lyric, many of whom have become subscribers themselves.

When I was growing up in the 1960s and '70s, people frequently responded to opera as something classic, almost old world, best seen and heard in traditional performances. Today, however, I relish the broad range of theatrical interpretation. I'm struck every season by performances that communicate a particular resonance with what's happening culturally or socially in our world at the time. Certain truths captured so memorably in opera are timeless, still challenging us as they challenged these works' original audiences. I think of recent productions, such as Rusalka or The Passenger – each was a truly visceral experience that stayed with me for weeks. This year I'm looking forward with great anticipation to Lyric's new production of The Marriage of Figaro, and especially to the world premiere of Bel Canto.

Under my watch, the next chapter in Lyric's history will implement the strategic plan the management and board developed four years ago. The principles of excellence, relevance, and fiscal responsibility are our key priorities of focus. I'm excited to witness Lyric becoming a broader provider of cultural service to Chicago and the Chicagoland region.

To stay excellent, relevant, and fiscally responsible in this rapidly changing world, we need to be prepared to innovate. That means looking beyond the customary constraints of our art form and asking, "What can we learn, borrow, beg, or steal from other forms of entertainment and cultural enrichment?" One idea behind the board's innovation committee has been to empower a small group of board members to do just that. In many ways Lyric Unlimited is our laboratory. Through it we are reaching out to communities throughout Chicago, we are forming collaborative partnerships with other cultural, community, and educational organizations, and we are exploring the ways in which opera, as an art form, may develop in the future.

Lyric offers an increasing number of diverse activities – not only our mainstage opera season, but also our productions of great musicals, Lyric Unlimited's wide-ranging projects, and, of course, our world-renowned Ryan Opera Center. But we need to think of ourselves as one Lyric. Everything we do is part of a unified, single-minded goal to be the great North American opera company of the twenty-first century.

Here's how Lyric plans an

TODD ROSENBERG

TODD ROSENBERG

Have you ever wondered how Lyric plans its seasons? The process is fascinating, with all the important considerations examined, tweaked, altered in all sorts of ways, months – in some cases, years – before you see the results onstage.

General director Anthony Freud and music director Sir Andrew Davis are responsible for planning each season, collaborating in the planning development process with deputy general director Drew Landmesser, director of artistic planning Andreas Melinat, and director of operations Nick Martin.

In terms of choosing repertoire, “I think we all have the same idea,” says Davis. “We want to have a really broad, interesting, fascinating mix. We’re trying to engage our audiences on all kinds of levels.” Davis brings up the example of last season’s The Passenger as an unknown work for Chicago that Lyric presented in its Midwest premiere: “This was a piece that nobody knew, but the buzz about it internationally was good, it had received a lot of attention. We felt it was very strong dramatically and that it would make a very strong operatic experience – as indeed it was for everyone who attended the performances.”

When planning a season in any performing-arts company, but particularly in opera, the key word is “balance.” The number of Lyric audience members who hear opera all over the world is comparatively small, notes Freud, so “for the majority of our audience, we’re the sole providers of an operatic diet. It’s an important part of our responsibility to make sure the diet is varied enough, both musically and theatrically.”

Most operas programmed at Lyric are repertoire-driven. “We start with the title and then plan the specific version of the title – production and cast – after we’ve decided in our minds to commit to that title,” Freud explains. “Occasionally we program a title because of a particular desire to make a commitment to a specific artist. For example, it’s unlikely that we’d plan Otello or Elektra without also knowing who we had in mind for the title roles, which are both very hard to cast. It isn’t logical to decide on Elektra and then spend the next year thinking who could sing it!” Although most of the repertoire is difficult to cast in a big house, when programming, say, The Marriage of Figaro, the company doesn’t necessarily need to begin by knowing who will be offered the leading roles.

TODD ROSENBERG

MICHAEL BROSILOW

Five of the major composers figuring prominently in Lyric's planning, represented here by productions during the past two seasons: previous page – Mozart (Don Giovanni, with Mariusz Kwiecień and Andrea Silvestrelli); Verdi (La traviata, with Marina Rebeka); Puccini (Tosca, with Tatiana Serjan and Evgeny Nikitin); this page – Wagner (Tannhäuser, with Gerald Finley and Amber Wagner) and Strauss (Capriccio, with William Burden and Renée Fleming).

as regularly we can afford. We wouldn't be fulfilling our potential as an opera company if we didn't do that."

Freud keeps the big picture in mind by looking at the operas on paper, spaced out over an extended period. He believes in the value of a ten-year rolling repertoire grid. With just eight operas "we can't cover the breadth of repertoire in a given season, so it's crucial to have that overview of how our repertoire evolves. That way, over ten years we can give enough attention to various styles of opera. Of course, not everything on the rep grid is fully committed. They are just ideas on a piece of paper. But that ten-year rolling perspective is important."

Once the list for a given season is created, it's presented to Lyric's senior management team, who test it objectively. If it passes, then it moves to the next stage – scheduling and budgeting. If it doesn't pass that test, it needs to be reworked and resubmitted. "It would be irresponsible to move ahead with a repertoire that didn't satisfy the objective testing while also generating the right level of excitement," says Freud.

Thanks to the need to book major artists whose availability may be limited, Lyric and other comparable international companies plan their seasons very far ahead. For the next five years, repertoire is reasonably solid – and for the next three years, it's completely solid. On the other hand, cautions Freud, "To consider it 'set in stone' is misleading, since repertoire changes are sometimes unavoidable, whether due to budgets or because a key artistic component of a project has a problem."

Audiences expect Lyric to cover a fairly broad repertoire. The most popular titles return once every five years or so. When it comes to more rarely heard pieces, it's inevitable that the schedule will reflect the taste of the company's artistic directorship. Sir Andrew's arrival as music director has brought to Lyric numerous pieces for which he has a particular enthusiasm, among them Billy Budd, Lulu, Jenůfa, and this season's Wozzeck, a work he has longed to perform for years. Freud notes, "My conversations with Andrew result in our identifying repertoire priorities for him and for me that we then incorporate into our repertoire grid. If they're important to Andrew and a number of other reasons make them sensible choices for us, then prioritizing his wish list is a major objective for me."

Davis notes with both gratitude and enthusiasm that Lyric's current Wozzeck is "driven by the fact that I've never done it, There's another factor that preoccupies Freud and his colleagues: "We own and live in one of the largest opera theaters in the world. When you perform in a 3,600-seat house, the core of your repertoire may be very different from a company based in a house half that size. That's not to say that Lyric doesn't encompass the full operatic repertoire in the Civic Opera House – we do! We've found ways to make small-scale pieces work in a large-scale environment. It's important, though, given that we're a large company in a large house, to commit to doing the repertoire's largest works

Verdi's formidable Nabucco is returning to Lyric this season for only the third time in company history.

despite my having conducted everything Berg ever wrote that needs a conductor! But it's also long overdue here [the last production was in 1993-94] – it's one of the great pieces." The British conductor's stature as one of today's great Straussians has had everything to do with Lyric's presentations of Capriccio (company premiere, 1994-95; revival, 2014-15) and Die Frau ohne Schatten (2007-08). Generally the first engagements confirmed in Davis's calendar are what he's conducting at Lyric: "My time commitment here is pretty well laid out until 2020, with just a few 'areas for maneuvers,' so to speak."

TODD ROSENBERG

When Freud, Davis, and Melinat get down to actual planning and prioritizing, they consider stars, familiar titles, unfamiliar titles, and historic importance (say, a world premiere or an American premiere). In thinking about last season, certain pieces were about the title rather than about stars (The Passenger, for example), whereas the opposite was true of Capriccio and Anna Bolena. After ten years Don Giovanni was due to return, and Lyric was able to put together an outstanding cast in a new production. Davis had been going through the major Wagner operas at Lyric, but hadn't yet done Tannhäuser, which hadn't been heard at Lyric in well over a quarter-century. The closing years of this decade will include a new production of Wagner's monumental Ring cycle, a work Sir Andrew is eager to revisit after triumphing with his first Ring at Lyric in 2004-05.

When Lyric looks at balancing the repertoire within any season, a major consideration is orchestra time: "In our orchestra contract," explains Melinat, "each performance up to four hours in duration counts as four hours of service from the orchestra. If you do Lulu at 3:58, it's four hours, but Elektra, at 1:45, also counts as four hours. The orchestra receives additional payment if the performance runs over four hours. Because of that time, there's only one very long title each season [Der Rosenkavalier in 2015-16]. It can have an effect on scheduling once you get beyond a certain length of performance."

A conscious effort is made every season to include titles that show off not only the company's renowned orchestra, but also its equally celebrated chorus. In 2015-16 Lyric has an average, balanced season in terms of the amount of choral singing per opera: one demanding title (Nabucco), a few medium titles, and some smaller titles, although the men's workload is compounded by their not having an opera off this year. Choral requirements may involve not just Lyric's regular chorus, but also the supplementary chorus; this means "not doing a whole season of pieces like Aida, Nabucco, and Fidelio,"

DAN REST

TODD ROSENBERG

DAN REST

Operas whose recent productions at Lyric were inspired in large part by Sir Andrew Davis's enthusiasm for them include Berg's Lulu in 2008-09 (Wolfgang Schöne and Marlis Petersen, left), Dvořák's Rusalka in 2013-14 (Ana María Martínez, center), and Strauss's Die Frau ohne Schatten in 2007-08 (Deborah Voigt and Jill Grove, right).

ROBERT KUSEL

Weinberg's The Passenger (2014-15), a bold programming choice at Lyric, was one of the company's most successful productions of recent years.

DAN REST

DAN REST

It's important to schedule sufficient days of rest between performance days when programming operas with strenuous leading roles, such as Otello (Johan Botha, 2012-13) and Elektra (Christine Goerke, 2013-14).

says Melinat. The same thing is true of dance priorities; with their large-scale ballet scenes, one wouldn't put Aida, La Gioconda, and Samson et Dalila together in an eight-opera season.

Sometimes a singer will be in place before any other members of the production team, or sometimes a conductor or a director will be the first name chosen. "This kind of planning happens organically," says Freud. "There's no prescribed process that determines who comes when." Considerations regarding casting can cover an article in themselves – you'll find it in the program for this season's Cinderella.

As for questions regarding the choice of production (will we build our own, co-own with another company, or rent?), it's Freud who has the final say, although, of course, he solicits input from his colleagues. If it's a new production, usually the chosen director will initiate ideas for his/her design team, although Freud notes that "there have been instances where I've put together a director and designer for the first time, and other instances where a director has worked with a range of designers and I've said, 'I'd like to use Designer A instead of Designer B.' Usually a design team is suggested by a director. We always have the chance to discuss, to disagree." Freud brings up the example of The Sound of Music: "The director, Marc Bruni, and the designer, Michael Yeargan, hadn't worked together. We'd worked with Michael many times, he knows our company and our theater, and he has vast experience in both opera and musicals. Marc has great experience in musicals, but he hadn't worked in a house like ours. I didn't impose one on the other, but having gotten to know both of them, I thought this would be a good match."

Freud makes clear that in planning the actual productions to be presented, "there are no straightforward answers. If, for example, we have a 35-year-old production of The Magic Flute or La bohème, however beloved and successful it's been, it's probably time to invest in a new one. For core repertoire operas, it makes sense for us either to create our own new productions or to enter into a coproduction partnership with two or more companies sharing ownership." At the other end of the spectrum, "you have an opera like The Passenger which is unlikely to be revived at Lyric, therefore we didn't create our own but instead rented the Bregenz Festival's wonderful production." Still, there are always exceptions to artistic rules: from time to time the company will commit to a new production that isn't going to be frequently revived, while at other times

When it comes to all aspects of opera planning, the most massive challenge for any major international company is arguably Wagner's four-opera Ring cycle (including Das Rheingold, pictured here, 2004-05 season).

Lyric might choose to rent a production of a mainstream opera. For example, the most recent Bohème was rented because, from a financial standpoint, a new production simply wasn't feasible at the time.

Once repertoire is confirmed, there is, of course, the practical matter of creating subscription packages: what titles will yield the necessary number of performances? Thinking of last season, Melinat notes that Tosca and Porgy and Bess are popular titles for which Lyric knows that more performances than usual can be scheduled.

Determining the number of performances per opera involves extended discussions between Melinat, director of operations Nick Martin, director of marketing Lisa Middleton, and director of ticketing services Paul Molinelli.

"Nick and I work on the performance calendar," says Melinat, "noting how many days a singer needs between performances of a particular opera. We'll then make a proposal of performance counts, based on our gut instincts and how many performances are needed to fulfill subscription series. Then Lisa and Paul will do research – do we schedule six Anna Bolenas or seven? Eight Trovatores or nine? A certain singer might say 'I'll only do a certain number of performances,' and we'll adhere to that. It's not always possible to find a comparable artist for a special major role at the time we need them, and we're not going to put Jane Smith on for just one performance."

The number of days between performances can make the difference between an adequate performance and a great one. At Lyric, almost invariably there's a minimum of two days: "Certain roles can be more taxing in a 3,600-seat house than a 1,000-seat house," explains Melinat. "In order for the artists to give their best to our Lyric audience, we want them to be properly rested." In operas that are especially demanding – Elektra, Norma, Otello, Tannhäuser – the protagonists need three days. Lyric schedules more matinees than other companies, which generally is not a problem. "If you were asking a soprano do a Friday evening Butterfly followed by a Sunday matinee, she wouldn't be pleased, although on the regional circuit that's actually very common. Fortunately, we're able to give generous spacing to the singer at Lyric."

Freud and Davis, with their enormous experience in opera, make realistic choices. "We're not even going to write on a piece of paper a season ten years hence that includes three five-hour operas, or a Schoenberg cycle, which we know we can't deliver from a practical point of view," Freud asserts. The season as a whole has to be, as he says, "affordable, schedulable, technically deliverable, able to sustain the desired levels of earned income through ticket sales and contributed income through sponsorship." Ultimately, "we want to create a season we can believe in – one that will enhance Lyric's international reputation, while thrilling our audiences with all the passion and imagination that make live opera the most memorable experience you can have in a theater."

THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO

Synopsis

TIME: Late 18th century (some time after the action of The Barber of Seville)

ACT ONE

A sparsely furnished room

ACT TWO

The Countess’s boudoir

Intermission

ACT THREE

Great hall of the castle

ACT FOUR

The garden

ACT ONE

It is the wedding day of Figaro, Count Almaviva’s valet, and Susanna, the Countess’s maid. Figaro’s satisfaction with their future quarters turns to apprehension upon hearing from Susanna that the Count has offered them the apartment next to his own, making it easier to press his unwelcome attentions on Susanna (Duetto: Se a caso madama). If the Count wants to dance, he, Figaro, will call the tune (Cavatina: Se vuol ballare).

Marcellina and Bartolo plot to prevent Figaro’s marriage. Eager to marry Figaro herself, Marcellina hopes to enforce the terms of an unpaid loan she had made to him. Bartolo joins her cause, longing to avenge himself for Figaro’s past offenses (Aria: La vendetta). Susanna and Marcellina exchange insults (Duetto: Via resti servita).

Cherubino, the Count’s page, is miserable because the Count dismissed him after catching him in a tête-à-tête with Barbarina, the gardener’s daughter. He confesses to Susanna that he trembles at the sight of any woman (Aria: Non so più cosa son).

When the Count approaches, Cherubino hides and overhears him wooing Susanna. Upon hearing Basilio approach, the Count also hides. Basilio has been acting on the Count’s behalf in his pursuit of Susanna. When Basilio hints that Cherubino is pursuing the Countess, the Count emerges from hiding and demands that the page be dismissed (Trio: Cosa sento?). As he tells how he caught Cherubino hiding at Barbarina’s house, the Count inadvertently uncovers him from yet another hiding place. Immediate reprisals are avoided by Figaro’s appearance with a group of peasants (Chorus: Giovani liete). To save face, the Count awards Cherubino a commission in his own regiment. Figaro sings the praises of military life encouraging the dejected Cherubino (Aria: Non più andrai).

ACT TWO

The Countess laments the loss of her husband’s love (Cavatina: Porgi amor). She and Susanna are discussing the morning’s events when Figaro arrives with a plan: They will confuse the Count by sending him an anonymous letter alleging that the Countess is receiving a lover, but meanwhile Susanna will agree to meet the Count in the garden. Attending in Susanna’s place will be Cherubino, disguised as a girl. The Countess will interrupt the tryst and force the Count to withdraw all opposition to Figaro’s marriage.

Cherubino sings a ballad to the Countess and Susanna (Canzonetta: Voi che sapete). The maid dresses him for his role in the plot (Aria: Venite, inginocchiatevi). When the Count knocks on the locked door, Cherubino hides in the closet. The Count is confronting his wife with the letter when a noise issues from the closet. The Countess claims that it is Susanna, but refuses to unlock the door (Trio: Susanna, or via sortite). Accompanied by his reluctant wife, the Count leaves to fetch tools to force the closet door open, locking the boudoir door on his way out. Once the two have left, Cherubino jumps out the window and Susanna takes his place in the closet.

When the closet door opens (Finale: Esci ormai, garzon malnato) Susanna steps out, to the Almavivas’ astonishment. The Count’s suspicions are nearly assuaged, excepting the anonymous letter. The ladies reply that this was Figaro’s little joke, but Figaro arrives and denies any knowledge of it. The Count becomes doubly suspicious when Antonio, the gardener, reports that he saw a man jump out the window, leaving behind a military commission as evidence. Assisted by Basilio and Bartolo, Marcellina attempts to present her case before the Count.

ACT THREE

Now with a plan of her own, the Countess orders Susanna to lure the Count to a rendezvous, to be kept by the Countess in disguise. Susanna carries out her mission (Duetto: Crudel, perchè finora). Upon overhearing Susanna whisper to Figaro that they have won their case, the Count vows to punish them both (Aria: Vedrò, mentr’io sospiro). While awaiting Susanna’s reply, the Countess is saddened to be reduced to these intrigues. Recalling happier days (Aria: Dove sono), she vows to change the Count’s heart.

With their lawyer Don Curzio, Marcellina and Bartolo entreat the Count for justice, but Figaro insists that he cannot marry without his parents’ consent. Unfortunately, since he was kidnapped in infancy, their identity remains a mystery to him. A birthmark reveals that Marcellina and Bartolo are the parents (Sextet: Riconosci in questo amplesso). Arriving with money to pay Figaro’s debt, Susanna discovers him embracing Marcellina. Fury turns to joy when Susanna learns the truth – now there will be a double wedding.

The Count learns from Antonio that Cherubino is still in the vicinity. A letter is dictated by the Countess to Susanna (Duetto: Sull’aria) and sealed with a pin. Susanna will deliver it to the Count, who will return the pin to her as a sign that the rendezvous will be kept.

When the disguised Cherubino appears with some village girls, Antonio detects his identity. Barbarina saves the day by claiming Cherubino as her promised reward for a kiss she had given the Count. Seeing the Count prick his finger while reading the letter, Figaro surmises that a love intrigue is involved.

ACT FOUR

Later that night, Barbarina searches for the pin, having dropped it in the garden (Cavatina: L’ho perduta). She explains to Figaro and Marcellina that the Count asked her to deliver the pin to Susanna “as the seal to the pine grove,” thus informing Figaro of the location of the tryst and the identity of the lady. Figaro rushes off to avenge all husbands, while Marcellina resolves to warn Susanna.

Returning with Basilio, Bartolo, and a group of workmen, Figaro instructs them to hide until he gives the signal to surprise the Count and Susanna. Figaro rails against womankind (Aria: Aprite un po’ quegli occhi). Marcellina informs Susanna that Figaro is waiting in ambush. Susanna exaggeratedly longs for her beloved – fully aware that he is listening (Cavatina: Deh! vieni, non tardar).

Disguised as Susanna, the Countess is visited first by Cherubino (Finale: Pian pianin le andrò più presso), then by her own husband, who offers a ring as a token of his love for “Susanna.” At the sound of Figaro’s arrival, the Countess flees. Disguised as her mistress, Susanna meets Figaro, and once he recognizes her voice, they reconcile their differences. The Count interrupts, thinking he has caught his wife with Figaro. Everyone emerges from hiding, and when the real Countess appears, the Count realizes that it is his own infidelities that have been revealed. The Countess forgives him and Figaro’s wedding celebration commences, finally unencumbered.

"I admire Figaro's improvisation skills," says the Czech bass-baritone. "He frequently finds that the plot is something other than what he thought it would be, but he always quickly adapts! I particularly like his third aria, because all the cards have been played, with Figaro now really hurt and let down. How is it possible that this woman he put his arm in the fire for has betrayed him, and even made fun of that fact? I also enjoy the opera's ensembles, where every phrase, whenever it comes, is just perfectly written and says exactly what it should." The Prague native made his professional debut at his hometown's National Theatre, where he has sung the Mozart/da Ponte operas, as well as La finta giardiniera and Rinaldo. Since 2010 he has been an ensemble member of the Vienna State Opera where, following his debut as Puccini's Schaunard, he has been acclaimed in Mozart (including Guglielmo/Così fan tutte and the title roles/Le nozze di Figaro and Don Giovanni), Handel, Rossini, and Donizetti. Plachetka's successes also include Figaro at the Salzburg Festival and Glyndebourne Festival Opera, as well as performances at other prestigious venues such as the Metropolitan Opera (Don Giovanni), La Scala (Così), the Théâtre Royal de la Monnaie, Covent Garden, the Deutsche Oper Berlin, the Berlin State Opera, and the Bavarian State Opera in Munich. Renowned conductors with whom Plachetka has collaborated include Barenboim, Gergiev, Muti, Nézet-Séguin, and Welser-Möst. Prominent in his discography are Così under Yannick Nézet-Séguin and a solo recital of Handel arias.

CHRISTIANE KARG
(Susanna)
American operatic debut
Also this season: Dialogues des Carmélites, Bavarian State Opera (Munich); Fauré Requiem, Berlin Philharmonic; song recital, Carnegie Hall.

In Mozart "there is a journey for every voice," the German soprano commented for the website of London's Wigmore Hall. "If some singers say Mozart is not for them, I think this is not true, because for every type of role you can find something in Mozart. For the light: Barbarina, Zerlina and Despina; more lyrical: Pamina and Susanna; and more dramatic: Donna Anna and Vitellia. His music is really for every kind of female voice. With Wagner, it always is a specific type of singer; Mozart, on the other hand, composed for everyone." Roles in works of Mozart, Cavalli, Puccini, Debussy, and Strauss have made Karg a favorite at the Frankfurt Opera, where she is a regular guest artist. She has earned great acclaim at Covent Garden (Die Zauberflöte), Glyndebourne (Hippolyte et Aricie, DVD) and the major houses of Dresden (Der Rosenkavalier), Vienna (Mitridate, Castor and Pollux, Béatrice et Bénédicte), Munich (Palestrina, DVD), Berlin (La bohème, Don Pasquale), and Lille (The Rake's Progress). Salzburg Festival appearances include most recently Orfeo ed Euridice and Don Giovanni. A sought-after concert artist and recitalist, Karg has recently appeared with Concentus Musicus Wien, the Dresden Staatskapelle, the Bavarian Radio Orchestra, the Salzburg Easter and Mostly Mozart Festivals, and in triumphant debuts at the Edinburgh Festival and the major recital venues of London, Vienna, Amsterdam, Frankfurt, and Stuttgart. Winner of the prestigious Echo Klassik award (2010) for her first CD of lieder, she has recorded Schumann's Faustszenen, Mendelssohn's Lobgesang, and six solo discs.

AMANDA MAJESKI
(Countess Almaviva)
Previously at Lyric Opera:
Eight roles since 2009-10, most recently Marta/The Passenger (2014-15); Vitellia/La clemenza di Tito (2013-14); Eva/Die Meistersinger (2012-13).
Also this season: Der

Rosenkavalier, Lyric Opera; The Marriage of Figaro, Metropolitan Opera; Capriccio, The Santa Fe Opera.

"I love working on new productions," says the Illinois-born soprano. "No matter how often you've done the role, you can work with a clean slate and with colleagues who bring all sorts of ideas with them. You find new perspectives and dig deeper – it's fun to 'start over' in that way." In The Marriage of Figaro, Majeski finds "some of the most beautiful music of all time. It sounds so simple and it's so relatable, yet it's complex. You put so much work into it, yet you gain so much." The first year of Majeski's Ryan Opera Center tenure included two triumphant performances singing the Countess as a last-minute substitute. Since then she has reprised this portrayal in St. Louis, Dresden, Glyndebourne, and at the Metropolitan Opera (where she opened last season in her company debut, premiering Richard Eyre's new production). Majeski scored one of her first career successes at Chicago Opera Theater as Mozart's Vitellia, subsequently singing it in Madrid and Dresden (where she has also starred in the title role/Alcina and Countess Madeleine/Capriccio). She has portrayed Marguerite/Faust in Zürich, and has made recent acclaimed role debuts as the Marschallin, Vreli/A Village Romeo and Juliet, Rusalka, and the Goose-Girl/Königskinder (CD), all at Oper Frankfurt. Among Majeski's American appearances have been Marguerite (Washington Concert Opera), Blanche/Dialogues des Carmélites (Pittsburgh Opera), Lisal/La sonnambula (Michigan Opera Theatre), and Ottone/Griselda (Santa Fe Opera). She made her New York City solo recital debut at Carnegie Hall's Weill Recital Hall in 2014.

LUCA PISONI
(Count Almaviva)
Previously at Lyric Opera:
Argante/Rinaldo (2011-12).
Also this season: Don Giovanni, Berlin State Opera; Le nozze di Figaro, Metropolitan Opera; Rossini's Maometto

Secondo, Canadian Opera Company.

The Italian bass-baritone has established himself as one of the most charismatic and versatile singers performing today. He is known for his portrayals of Figaro (Met, San Francisco, Vienna, Salzburg, Santa Fe, Paris), Leporello (Met, Madrid, Baden-Baden, CD), and Guglielmo (Glyndebourne, Salzburg DVD). He debuted as Mozart's Count in Houston in 2011 and reprised his portrayal earlier this year in San Francisco and Salzburg. Pisoni has premiered two new Met productions, The Enchanted Island and Don Giovanni (both seen in HD). He has also won praise in bel canto repertoire (Maometto Secondo, Santa Fe; Anna Bolena, Vienna, Zürich; Cinderella, Met; La donna del lago, Salzburg) and in Baroque music (Radamisto, Santa Fe; Rinaldo, Glyndebourne, DVD; Erocole Amante, Amsterdam, DVD). Pisoni considers any new operatic role carefully: "You cannot just sing Mozart and the Baroque till you're 40, then start singing Verdi the day you turn 40. It's a marathon, not the 100 meters! I'd rather do things a little bit later rather than too soon and not be up to par. If I start singing Verdi in ten years' time, I'll still have 15 years in which to sing those roles. Right now I can enjoy working with my teacher on, say, Simon Boccanegra, knowing that when I come back to it I'll be on the right path." Concerts have brought Pisoni to the Vienna Musikverein, the Berlin Philharmonic, the San Francisco Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, and Rome's Accademia di Santa Cecilia. He has earned acclaim in recitals at Carnegie Hall, Ravinia, Amsterdam's Concertgebouw, and London's Wigmore Hall.

RACHEL FRENKEL
(Cherubino)
Lyric Opera debut
Also this season:
La Cenerentola, Romeo and Juliet, Vienna State Opera; The Marriage of Figaro, Edinburgh Festival.

"There are so many colors in Cherubino's character," says the Israeli mezzo-soprano. "You can play him as a teenager with some experience – almost like a little Don Giovanni – or as a boy who's a bit embarrassed by his sexuality. He's a messenger of love to everyone, and brings so much light and joy to everything onstage. His second aria, 'Voi che sapete,' is written very simply, and he's trying to control himself there, holding himself back, whereas his first aria, 'Non so più cosa son,' is more impulsive and emotional." Frenkel's Cherubino has been a great success at the state operas of Berlin, Munich, and Vienna, as well as at Opéra Montpellier, the Los Angeles Philharmonic, and the Budapest Festival Orchestra. Upon graduating from Tel Aviv's Buchmann-Mehta School of Music, Frenkel developed her repertoire at the Israeli Opera and subsequently in two seasons with the ensemble of the Berlin State Opera. She appears frequently at the Vienna State Opera, where, besides Cherubino, she has portrayed Rosina, Fenena/Nabucco, and Cenerentola. Leading roles elsewhere in Europe include Nicklausse/Les contes d'Hoffmann (Bregenz), Dorabella and Rosina (Dresden), Ramiro/La finta giardiniera (Glyndebourne), Idamante/Idomeneo (Lille), and the Composer/Ariadne auf Naxos (Hamburg). In the latter work she sang Dryade at Baden-Baden's Festspielhaus (a performance currently available on DVD). In Salzburg she has appeared under the batons of both Christian Thielemann (Die Frau ohne Schatten) and Sir Simon Rattle (Carmen). Concerts have brought her to Amsterdam's Concertgebouw, the Berlin Philharmonic, Camerata Salzburg, and Tokyo's NHK Symphony Orchestra.

KATHARINE GOELDNER (Marcellina)
Previously at Lyric Opera:
Title role/Carmen, Pitti-Sing/The Mikado, (both 2010-11); Suzuki/Madama Butterfly (2008-09).
Also this season: Aida,

Utah Opera; David T. Little's JFK (world premiere), Fort Worth Opera Festival; Jack Purla's Shalimar the Clown (world premiere), Opera Theatre of Saint Louis.

The American mezzo-soprano, who made her professional debut as Cherubino at Salzburg's Landestheater and later reprised that role at the Metropolitan Opera, first sang Marcellina on the Salzburg Easter Festival's tour to Japan: "Those two are vastly different characters – you're switching from boyish youthfulness to someone who's sly but sexy. Marcellina is not an old lady and is rarely played that way anymore. It has to be believable that she might actually marry Figaro. She's a cougar."

Among Goeldner's recent new roles have been Thirza, protagonist of Dame Ethel Smyth's The Wreckers at Bard Summerscape ("It's like Isolde without the high Cs!"), and Herodias/Salome at Cedar Rapids Opera, reprised at Virginia Opera ("You get to stumble around the stage and yell at people – what's not to like?"). Earlier this season Goeldner sang Mahler's Das Lied von der Erde with the Royal Ballet (Covent Garden, Lincoln Center). Her diverse repertoire encompasses such major roles as Carmen (Lyric, New York City Opera, Madison, Finland's Savonlinna Festival), Jane Seymour/Anna Bolena (Met, Welsh National Opera), Fricka/Das Rheingold and Waltraute/Götterdämmerung (Toulouse), Orlofsky (Met and with Seiji Ozawa in Japan), Nicklausse (Met, Bilbao, DVD), Gertrude/Hamlet (Minnesota Opera), Octavian/Der Rosenkavalier (Toulouse, Seville, Lyon), the Composer/Ariadne auf Naxos (Oviedo, Madrid, Salzburg, Toulouse, Lyon, Paris), Countess Geschwitz/Lulu (Graz, Toulouse), and Brangäne/Tristan und Isolde (Salzburg). Goeldner has been heard in concert with the National Symphony, the Mozarteum Orchestra, the Bruckner Orchestra, and the radio orchestras of Vienna, Paris, Munich, Prague, and Berlin.

KEITH JAMESON
(Basilio)
Previously at Lyric Opera:
Five roles since 2007-08, most recently Monsieur Taupel/Capriccio (2014-15); Flute/A Midsummer Night's Dream (2010-11); Basilio/The Marriage of Figaro (2009-10).

Also this season: Mark Adamo's Becoming Santa Claus (world premiere), The Dallas Opera; Rusalka, Houston Grand Opera; Madama Butterfly, Los Angeles Opera.

"Slimy" is the only adjective you ever hear for Basilio," says the American tenor. "He always turns into a caricature. Because it's Mozart, it can't be ugly singing – I want to sing this music as beautifully as possible and create the characterization within my body. I love the trio: Basilio already knows that there's some hanky-panky between the Count and Susanna – or he thinks there is – and now he sees Susanna in what he thinks is a compromising situation with Cherubino. He loves the knowledge, and being the person who knows everything." Jameson previously portrayed Basilio at Lyric and at The Santa Fe Opera. His other Santa Fe successes include Falstaff, Ariadne auf Naxos, Billy Budd, Madama Butterfly, and two world premieres, The Letter and Life is a Dream. He returned to the Metropolitan Opera last season for Iolanta, having previously appeared there in War and Peace, Billy Budd, Gianni Schicchi, Carmen, and Francesca da Rimini. He sang 14 roles at New York City Opera, ranging stylistically from Oronte/Alcina to Goro/Madama Butterfly. Other important appearances include Candide (Baltimore Symphony Orchestra), Florence May Festival, São Paulo Orchestra), The Classical Style (Carnegie Hall), The Cunning Little Vixen (New York Philharmonic), The Golden Ticket (Atlanta), Billy Budd (Los Angeles), The Bartered Bride (Boston), Les contes d'Hoffmann (Seattle), Turandot (Santa Fe, Fort Worth, Atlanta), and Die Gezeichneten (Los Angeles). Performances abroad also include The Mikado (English National Opera), The Turn of the Screw (Liège), and Falstaff (Saito Kinen Festival).

BRINDLEY SHERRATT
(Bartolo)
Lyric Opera debut
Also this season:
Wozzeck, Lyric Opera;
Eugene Onegin, Royal
Opera House, Covent
Garden; Manon Lescaut, Metropolitan Opera.

The British bass, who sang his first Bartolo at the 2008 Salzburg Festival, enjoys the patter element required in his aria: "There isn't much in my repertoire that asks for that – just Bartolo, Mozart's Leporello, and Rossini's Basilio. I do love text, although rather than the buffo roles, I sing the more lyrical stuff now. I enjoy Mozart's ensembles, having spent a lot of time early in my career in choirs. When I made the break, I had to retrain. Suddenly you're onstage with big voices and you think, 'I need a bigger boat.' In choirs the object is to blend with your colleagues, but now it's the opposite – it's OK to stick out!" One of today's most successful basses internationally, Sherratt debuted at the Metropolitan Opera last season as Trulove/The Rake's Progress. He has performed the gamut of leading roles for his vocal category, from Sarastro/The Magic Flute (Amsterdam, Vienna, Covent Garden) and Rocco/Fidelio (Glyndebourne) to roles as diverse as Balducci/Benvenuto Cellini (Salzburg), Pogner/Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg (Welsh National Opera, BBC Proms), Philip II/Don Carlo (Opera North), Fiesco/Simon Boccanegra (English National Opera), Claggart/Billy Budd (Glyndebourne, BBC Proms, Brooklyn Academy of Music), and Bottom/A Midsummer Night's Dream (Festival d'Aix-en-Provence). In demand on the concert platform he has appeared at the Bregenz, Edinburgh, Lucerne, Salzburg and Three Choirs festivals and at the BBC Proms. His recent concert appearances have included the Orchestra of the Royal Opera House, the Hallé Orchestra, the Swedish Radio Orchestra, the Chamber London Philharmonic, and the Rotterdam Philharmonic, among many other prestigious ensembles.

HLENGIWE MKHWANAZI
(Barbarina)
Previously at Lyric Opera:
Clara/Porgy and Bess
(2014-15).
Also this season: Der Rosenkavalier, Lyric Opera.

A second-year member of the Ryan Opera Center, the South African soprano learned during her first year with the program that "when it comes to singing, I can go on and on until forever. During the first half of the year I was involved in one opera after another, and after that I felt I could do any role offered to me – provided, of course, that I prepared in a timely fashion. I also realized how much I could learn from simply watching other artists – how they respond to each other, how they share energy onstage." Mkhwanazi debuted in Chicago in 2014 singing the leading role of Thérèse/Poulenc's Les mamelles de Tirésias with the Civic Orchestra. In America she has been heard as Susanna/Le nozze di Figaro at Brown University. She is an alumna of the South African College of Music at the University of Cape Town. Her performances with Cape Town Opera include Konstanze and Antonia at Cape Town Opera Theatre and Fiordiligi, Adina, Anne Trulove, and Madama Cortese/Il viaggio a Reims at Cape Town's Baxter Theatre. The soprano's successes in competitions include the 2015 Women's Voice Fellowship from the Luminarts Cultural Foundation. Hlengiwe Mkhwanazi is sponsored by Susan and Richard Kipbart and Drs. Funmi and Sola Olopade.

BRADLEY SMOAK
(Antonio)
Previously at Lyric Opera:
First SS Officer/*The
Passenger*, Sciarrone/Tosca,
Servant/Capriccio
(all 2014-15).
*Also this season: Wozzeck,
Bel Canto*, both at Lyric

Opera; La bohème, Opera Theatre of Saint Louis.

Antonio is "a bit older than I am, so that's a fun dramatic challenge," says the bass, a second-year Ryan Opera Center member. Portraying the character at Opera Theatre of Saint Louis, "the real challenge wasn't that I was singing in English, but that I wore wooden clogs. Just trying to walk three steps onstage was a task in itself." Earlier this spring Smoak appeared in L'enfant et les sortilèges and Pelléas et Mélisande with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, the former at especially short notice: "In L'enfant there were two high F-sharps, which I'd never sung in public! I'm grateful that I had no time to think about it, which helped a lot." The North Carolina native has been heard nationwide, with particular success at Opera Theatre of Saint Louis where, in addition to Antonio, he has sung the King of Hearts/Alice in Wonderland, Pirate King/The Pirates of Penzance, Masetto/Don Giovanni, and Second Soldier/Salome. Smoak has also performed with Boston Lyric Opera, Opera North, Palm Beach Opera, Sarasota Opera, Opera Omaha, Opera Charleston, Opera Roanoke, Annapolis Opera, and DuPage Opera Theatre. He made his international operatic debut at Ireland's Wexford Festival Opera in Corigliano's The Ghosts of Versailles, returning for Donizetti's Maria Padilla and Smetana's The Kiss. Smoak is an alumnus of Illinois Wesleyan University. Bradley Smoak is sponsored by The Elizabeth F. Cheney Foundation.

JONATHAN JOHNSON
(Curzio)
Previously at Lyric Opera:
Third SS Officer/*The
Passenger*, Ruiz/Il trovatore,
Servant/Capriccio (2014-15).
Also this season: The Merry Widow, Der Rosenkavalier, both at Lyric Opera.

The tenor's first new production at Lyric brings him into "an opera I'd never spent much time with at all, because I never thought I'd be in it, and here I am! I've heard from people forever about how every character in The Marriage of Figaro has to be into everything that happens, and so much happens offstage that informs what you see onstage. You have to work it more in depth than other operas, because it's such an ensemble show. It's amazing the way the finale of Act Two builds in a huge crescendo as you keep adding people. I hadn't anticipated being so excited about the whole opera." A second-year Ryan Opera Center member and a native of Macon, Georgia, Johnson holds a Professional Artist Certificate from the University of North Carolina School of the Arts, where his leading roles included Ruggero/

La rondine, Lechmere/Owen Wingrave, Azaël/Debussy's L'enfant prodigue, and Fenton/Die lustigen Weiber von Windsor. Johnson's other performance credits include Ezekiel Cheever/The Crucible (Piedmont Opera), and both the title role/Candide and Rev. Horace Adams/Peter Grimes (Aspen Summer Music Institute). At Mercer University, where the tenor received his bachelor of music degree, he sang the title role/Cavalli's L'Egisto, Camille de Rosillon/The Merry Widow, and Nemorino/L'elisir d'amore. Jonathan Johnson is sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. William C. Vance.

LAURA WILDE

(Peasant Girl)

Previously at Lyric Opera:

Kate Pinkerton/Madama Butterfly, Flowermaiden/Parsifal (both 2013-14).

Also this season: Nabucco, Der Rosenkavalier, both at Lyric Opera; Jenůfa, English National Opera.

"I've made so many vocal strides at the Ryan Opera Center," says the South Dakota native, a third-year member of the program. A week of rehearsals as the Countess understudy in Capriccio was especially memorable: "There was a particularly challenging passage – right after La Roche's diatribe, when the Countess is celebrating him – where it's extraordinarily high, as if Strauss were suddenly writing for a different soprano. I was terrified of it, but in a rehearsal I wound up doing it six times and at the end I thought, 'I've got this figured out!' It was an awesome feeling." Wilde was a Marion Roose Pullin Artist in Residence with Arizona Opera, appearing in The Marriage of Figaro, Romeo and Juliet, Lucia di Lammermoor, Faust, and Cavalleria rusticana. She has also participated in the young-artist programs of The Santa Fe Opera (King Roger) and Opera Theatre of Saint Louis (The Death of Klinghoffer, A Little Night Music). In 2013 Wilde returned to the Phoenix Symphony for Ravel's Shéhérazade. A 2010 Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions semi-finalist, The soprano is a two-time recipient of the Elihu Hyndman Memorial Award from Opera Theatre of Saint Louis. She is an alumna of Indiana University (Little Women, Litaliana in Algeri, Cendrillon) and St. Olaf College. Laura Wilde is sponsored by an Anonymous Donor and Mrs. J. W. Van Gorkom.

LINDSAY METZGER

(Peasant Girl)

Lyric Opera debut

Also this season: Der Rosenkavalier, Lyric Opera.

"As an undergraduate at DePaul University I saw my first opera at Lyric," says the mezzo-soprano, a first-year Ryan Opera Center member and a native of Mundelein, Illinois. "Early on, Harry Silverstein, our opera director, asked me, 'Where do you see yourself in five years?' I said, 'In a reputable young-artist program,' not knowing that this is what I meant! When I eventually learned more about the Ryan Opera Center, I realized it would have everything I could want – it was a goal of mine to be here." A two-season apprentice artist at Des Moines Metro Opera, Metzger was also a studio artist last season at Milwaukee's Florentine Opera (Giannetta/L'elisir d'amore). Other recent portrayals include Cinderella (Lyric's "Opera in the Neighborhoods"), Cherubino (La Musica Lirica in Novafeltria, Italy), Daphne/La descente d'Orphée aux enfers (Chicago's Haymarket Opera Company), Nella/Gianni Schicchi (DuPage Opera Theatre), the title role/Ariodante, Béatrice/Béatrice et Bénédicte, and Beppe/L'amico Fritz (all at the University of Wisconsin-Madison). Metzger debuted with the Grant Park Symphony in Fauré's Requiem. She has received the Paul Collins Fellowship from University of Wisconsin-Madison and the Virginia Cooper Meier Award from the Musician's Club of Women. Lindsay Metzger is sponsored by an Anonymous Donor.

HENRIK NÁNÁSI

(Conductor)

American debut

Also this season: Macbeth, Palau de les Arts Reina Sofia (Valencia); Eugene Onegin, Komische Oper Berlin; The Magic Flute, Gran Teatre del

Liceu (Barcelona).

The Hungarian conductor, general music director of the Komische Oper Berlin, debuted with the company premiering a new Magic Flute (2012-13). After studying in Budapest and Vienna, Nánási worked on the musical staffs at Covent Garden, the Opéra de Monte Carlo, and started his conducting career at the opera houses of Klagenfurt, Augsburg, and Munich's Theater am Gärtnerplatz. Today Nánási is a frequent guest conductor internationally, with recent successes including debuts at Covent Garden (Turandot, DVD), Munich's Bavarian State Opera (La traviata), the Verona Arena (Carmen, telecast worldwide), the Hamburg State Opera (Otello), and the Zurich Opera House (The Marriage of Figaro). He has also led performances for the leading houses of Dresden, Valencia and Frankfurt. Concerts have brought him to the Radio-Symphonieorchester Wien, Bruckner Orchester Linz, Orquestra de la Comunitat Valenciana, and the major orchestras of Florence, Naples and Palermo. His numerous honors include the Scholarship of the Alban Berg Foundation for Composers and the Richard Wagner Foundation Bayreuth Prize. The conductor commented to the nachtgedanken.de website that he finds the greatest challenge of his work "studying the score. It's where everything begins, and where everything happens. One becomes acquainted with the composer – it's where the piece and one's identification of the piece with the composer take place. It demands a great deal of concentration, which I find simultaneously most difficult and most wonderful. Naturally, there are varying degrees of difficulty in specific works. Some composers are easier to understand, some scores are easier than others to learn. When one is simply alone with the material: that is the most beautiful thing."

BARBARA GAINES

(Director)

Previously at Lyric Opera: Macbeth (2010-11).

Also this season: Tug of War: Foreign Fire – Edward III, Henry V, Henry VI, Part I, Chicago Shakespeare Theater.

"What I love about opera," says the renowned American director, "is being immersed in its music. Swimming inside Mozart's soul is life-giving. Learning the music and feeling the music has been a great gift. When Anthony Freud asked me to direct Figaro, not an opera previously on my 'wish-list,' I found a story all about character and human foibles – exactly what I love so passionately in Shakespeare – and so I have Anthony to thank for giving me the joy of creating this production." Founder and artistic director of Chicago Shakespeare Theater, Gaines has directed more than 30 of Shakespeare's plays there, most recently last season's King Lear. The 2014-15 season also included her world-premiere production of Paul Gordon's musical, Sense and Sensibility. Among Gaines's many honors are the 2008 Tony Award for Outstanding Regional Theatre; the prestigious Honorary

OBE (Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) in recognition of her contributions strengthening British-American cultural relations; and Joseph Jefferson Awards for Best Director and Best Production for Hamlet, Cymbeline, King Lear, and The Comedy of Errors. She has also received the Public Humanities Award from the Illinois Humanities Council, the Spirit of Loyola Award, and an Honorary Doctorate of Letters from the University of Birmingham in the U.K. She serves on the Shakespearean Council of Shakespeare's Globe Theatre in London and is a Life Trustee of Northwestern University. (See Director's Note, p. 38.)

JAMES NOONE

(Set Designer)

Previously at Lyric Opera: Macbeth (2010-11).

Also this season:

Winnie Holzman's Choice, Huntington Theatre (Boston); Kiss Me, Kate, Shakespeare Theatre

Company (Washington, D.C.); David Ives's Metromaniacs, Old Globe Theatre (San Diego).

"In this production I wanted to create a simple design, where all you see is the performer," says the American set designer. "The actor really comes forward. It's not about the set – it's about how the actors connect with each other, and how they get everything across so that the audience can connect with them. This isn't a big opera like Verdi or Wagner – the music is light and delicate. We wanted to be able to get the sound out to the audience as well, and not have it be buried in a deep set." Noone is closely associated with the Glimmerglass festival, and his operatic work has also been seen at the New York City, Houston, Los Angeles, Washington, and Canadian opera companies. He has worked for such prestigious New York theaters as Playwrights Horizons, Manhattan Theatre Club, Lincoln Center Theater, and Roundabout Theatre Company. Off-Broadway credits include the original productions of Frankie and Johnny at the Clair de Lune, Three Tall Women, and A Bronx Tale; Cowgirls, Breaking Legs, the musical Ruthless; the first revival of The Boys in the Band; and the solo shows Full Gallop and Fully Committed. Broadway productions include Jekyll and Hyde, A Class Act, A Bronx Tale, Come Back, Little Sheba, and numerous productions for Tony Randall's National Actor's Theatre. Among Noone's many awards are the Drama Desk, American Theatre Wing

Design Award, two Helen Hayes Awards, the LA Ovation Award, and two NAACP Theatre Design Awards. Noone is head of the scenic design department at Boston University.

SUSAN MICKEY

(Costume Designer)

Lyric Opera debut

Also this season: Tug of War: Foreign Fire – Edward III, Henry V, Henry VI, Part 1, Chicago Shakespeare Theater.

In describing her preparation with Barbara Gaines for this production, the American costume designer recalls that they began with "the quality of the music. We wanted the opera to look like the music, with its charm, wit, and wonderful playfulness. We also wanted the lush quality of the period, but without the constraint of historical boundaries. We are viewing a period through a contemporary lens." Mickey has designed extensively in regional theater, television, film, and print. Her work at Chicago Shakespeare Theater has won acclaim in Sense and Sensibility (2015), The School for Lies (2014), and The Madness of George III (2010) – the latter two productions earned Jeff Awards for Best Costume Design. Mickey cherishes her associations with the Oregon Shakespeare Festival (15 seasons), Atlanta's Alliance Theatre (associate artist, more than 50 productions over 30 years), and The Virginia Stage Company: "When you find a group of artists and artisans with whom you're making work that spans your lifetime, and when those relationships are successful, you keep returning to them and reaching deeper." Mickey's credits in television and film include The Catlins (TBS), Miss Evers' Boys (HBO), Mama Flora's Family (CBS), and Driving Miss Daisy. She has also worked as a photo stylist and creative designer for the print industry. Mickey is senior associate chair and head of the production area and the design/technology program at the University of Texas at Austin. In 2014 she received the Michael Merritt Award for Lifetime Achievement in Design and Collaboration.

ROBERT WIERZEL

(Lighting Designer)

Previously at Lyric Opera: Macbeth (2010-11); Partenope (2002-03).

Also this season: Philip Glass's Appomattox, Washington National Opera; Jose Rivera's

Another Word for Beauty (world premiere),

Goodman Theatre; Paul Moravec's The Shining (world premiere), The Minnesota Opera.

"We want to give this opera's story a fresh, more contemporary sensibility, even though it's in a period setting," says the American lighting designer. "In the first three acts the lighting contributes crispness and cleanness, with interiors that are warm and inviting. But in the last scene, how do we deal with people onstage who can't really see each other, while revealing them to an audience that does need to see them? That involves a certain level of abstraction, finding the fun and comedy, with cool, dappled, slightly romantic light." Among Wierzel's recent operatic achievements during the past two seasons have been productions for the Glimmerglass festival (Cato in Utica, Macbeth, Madama Butterfly, An American Tragedy), Seattle Opera (Semele, Ariadne auf Naxos, Les contes d'Hoffmann), Boston Lyric Opera (Le vin herbé), and Bergen National Opera (Le coq d'or). Wierzel has also designed for Paris's Palais Garnier and the major opera companies of Toronto, Montreal, San Francisco, and Houston, among others. Broadway productions include Lady Day at Emerson's Bar and Grill starring Audra McDonald, Fela! (Tony nomination), and David Copperfield's Dreams and Nightmares. Off-Broadway Wierzel has been associated with the Roundabout, Public, Signature, and Playwrights Horizons theater companies. The Yale School of Drama alumnus currently teaches there and at NYU's Tisch School of the Arts.

MICHAEL BLACK

(Chorus Master)

Previously at Lyric Opera: Chorus master since 2013-14; interim chorus master, 2011-12.

"The Figaro chorus sings for just a few pages," says Lyric Opera's chorus master. "They're peasants in both their scenes. The chorus in Act One is sung a little more rustically than those in Act Three -- they're singing in praise of the Count, but they're gritting their teeth when they sing! It's rather disingenuous. They're able to sing with a little more grace in Act Three, as when the ladies enter. They can be incredibly genuine and well-meaning in that scene.” Black’s activities immediately following Lyric’s 2014-15 season included preparing the choruses for Figaro (Western Australian Opera), Britten’s War Requiem (Melbourne Symphony Orchestra, Sir Andrew Davis conducting), and Haydn’s Harmoniemesse (Grant Park Festival debut). Chorus master from 2001 to 2013 at Opera Australia, Black prepared the OA chorus for more than 90 operas and many concert works. At OA he progressed from rehearsal pianist to assistant chorus master and children’s chorus master, before his appointment as chorus master. In that capacity he has served such distinguished organizations as the Edinburgh Festival, Holland Park Opera (London), and, in Australia, the Sydney Symphony Orchestra (including Rachmaninoff’s The Bells, led by Vladimir Ashkenazy), Philharmonia Choir, Motet Choir, and Cantillation chamber choir. He has been a lecturer at the Sydney Conservatorium of Music, of which he is an alumnus.

HARRISON McELDOWNEY
(Choreographer)
Previously at Lyric Opera: Macbeth (2010-11).
Also this season: “Group Therapy,” performed by Arkansas Ballet; “Dance Sport,” performed by Missouri State University; continuing work for Wilson Dow Group and Under the Radar (Chicago-based special-events companies).

“In our production there is movement for the principals and ensemble onstage throughout the opera,” says the American choreographer, “and it all has to be timed to the music. This is a comedy of errors, in which everything depends on an organic sense of timing. Comedy and farce use particular posturing and gesturing to make it funny, and it’s also a period piece; everything about people’s demeanor was different from today, and that has to be apparent as well.” Earlier this year in Chicago, McEldowney received the Artistic Achievement Award in Choreography from the National Association of Dance Masters. He is a past winner of the Prince Prize and the Ruth Page, After Dark, and Choo-San Goh Awards for choreography. McEldowney has created works for Hubbard Street Dance Chicago, Hubbard Street 2, River North Chicago Dance Company, the Civic Ballet of Chicago, the Cerqua/Rivera Art Experience, Ballet Met, American Repertory Ballet, Louisville Ballet, and Chicago Shakespeare Theater. He choreographs for Chicago’s renowned Baton Show Lounge, and earlier this year he directed all aspects of the christening ceremony of the cruise ship Brittania in Southampton, England, attended by Queen Elizabeth II. McEldowney’s work was seen at the Barcelona Olympics’ Closing Ceremonies and Carnegie Hall’s Celebration of 125 Years of Musical Theater. McEldowney is one of only two choreographers creating original works for Chicago’s annual Dance for Life fundraiser. He recently starred in Venetia Stifler and Larry Long’s revival of Ruth Page’s ballet Billy Sunday, receiving a regional Emmy nomination for the PBS telecast.

SARAH HATTEN
(Wigmaster and Makeup Designer)
Previously at Lyric Opera: Wigmaster and makeup designer since 2011-12.

“The costumes for Lyric’s new Figaro, including wigs and makeup, are a central focus of this production,” says Lyric’s wigmaster and makeup designer. “They’re very vibrant, with period elements but also very bold colors. The wigs take period hairstyles and turn them up a notch. The reds, for example, aren’t a natural red hair color, they’re an exaggerated natural but carrot-orange red. From the research on fashion images done by our costume designer, Susan Mickey, we’ve gotten some big up-dos with lots of messy curls. Susan has incorporated great headpieces and hair jewelry into the wigs – the principal female characters all have something special to ornament their hair. The two leading men are both very sexy: the Count with his hair resembling a rock star of the 70s or 80s, Figaro with tousled hair that’s natural-looking but along the lines of a romance novel’s idea of his character.” Hatten has worked in a wide repertoire at Des Moines Metro Opera and Michigan Opera Theatre (both since 2006), as well as Columbus Opera, Toledo Opera, the Cabrillo Music Festival, and the University of Cincinnati College-Conservatory of Music. She has also worked at the Glimmerglass Festival and the major opera companies of Los Angeles, Omaha, Cleveland, Sarasota, and Central City, as well as Wisconsin’s American Players Theatre and, in Los Angeles, the Pantages Theatre and the Geffen Playhouse. Hatten earned a B. A. in music at Simpson College.

The Marriage of Figaro: Craziness, Reciprocity, Love

By Martha C. Nussbaum

DAN REST

Susanna and Figaro are finally married: the finale of Act Three at Lyric Opera, 2009-10 season.

Officially, The Marriage of Figaro (1786) is based on Beaumarchais's radical comedy of 1778, a savage indictment of feudalism that was quickly seen as a precursor of the French Revolution. Admirers of the play have typically found the opera disappointing, viewing it as an innocuous and even trivial drama of personal love with no political bite. Sometimes directors, embarrassed by this critique, try to make the opera more "serious" by imposing a simple, overt political message on it, flouting the subtle and volatile passions of Mozart's music.

But the world of human passion, love, craziness revealed in the music is profound in its own way. It would be a mistake to think that human passions are trivial, or indeed irrelevant to how men and women might possibly live together in society. The music, its own emotional universe, goes far deeper than Beaumarchais's play, deeper even than da Ponte's witty libretto, making a subtle and enduring statement about the imperfections and glories of human love, and the need for generous acceptance of those imperfections, if we are ever to pursue happiness together in a flawed world.

For Beaumarchais, the story's central contrast is that between the Count, representative of the old regime, and Figaro, precursor of the new. One of our first clues to Mozart's subversive rereading is the fact, which we notice early, that Figaro and the Count are very similar, both musically and thematically. (The two roles are written so that the same singer could sing either role.) What do these men sing about when they are alone? Outraged honor, the desire for revenge, the pleasure of dominating your male adversary. What emotions are absent? Love, wonder, delight – even grief and longing. The energies that drive them are not alien, but deeply akin. If Figaro is the harbinger of a new world, we don't hear it, since his passions are those of the old. If he's going to be happy in love (and, we might add, if the new regime is to be happy in reciprocity), he will have to learn a different tune – and, as Mozart soon shows, he will need to learn it from women.

The females of the opera inhabit a musical and textual world that is from the beginning utterly unlike that of the men. First of all, it contains friendship. Susanna and the Countess plot together, joke together. Unlike the men, they use their similarity not for mutual combat but for cooperation. All this is in the libretto: but the music takes the suggestion of reciprocity and equality much further. In the remarkable letter duet, the women take inspiration from one another's musical phrases, exchanging ideas with a sinuous capacity for response and a heightened awareness of the other's pitch, rhythm, and even timbre, ultimately achieving closely-knit harmony. Their musical partnership expresses a friendly attunement that is, we might say, an image of mutual respect, but also a reciprocal affection that goes deeper than respect.

This duet has acquired fame in American popular culture because of its use in the film version of Stephen King's The Shawshank Redemption, when Tim Robbins, the convict who has become the prison's librarian, figures out a way to play it for all the prisoners over the PA system, and, locking the door, stops the prison hierarchy from interfering until the duet is done. The men of Shawshank certainly are not fans of classical music, but they hear something in this music, and stop in their tracks, transfixed by a promise of happiness. As Morgan Freeman expresses it, looking back: "I have no idea what those two Italian ladies were singing about. Truth is, I don't want to know. Some things are better left unsaid. I'd like to think they were singing about something so beautiful, it can't be expressed in words, and it makes your heart ache because of it...and for the briefest of moments, every last man in Shawshank felt free.”

What do the prisoners hear in the duet? Freedom, they say. But why, and how? First, they cannot help hearing an absence of hierarchy in the evenly-matched voices, and a partnership based on responsiveness rather than dictatorial power. This, in the context of Shawshank, is already freedom. But, as the voices soar out over the squalor of the prison yard, I think there is more to be heard in it: the idea of a kind of internal freedom, a freedom of the spirit that consists precisely in not caring about hierarchy, neither seeking to avoid being controlled by others nor seeking to control them. And that’s a radical idea indeed, both in the opera and in the movie’s world of American masculinity.

There is one male character in the opera who does not sing in a male voice: the teenage boy Cherubino, performed by a female mezzo-soprano. This already seems significant: and Cherubino’s education, it shortly emerges, is the focal point of the opera’s depiction of what a new type of man might be.

Cherubino is usually treated superficially, as a running joke throughout the opera, and this is, more or less, the way Beaumarchais treats him. His preoccupation with women and sex is indeed the source of much of the plot, as he turns up repeatedly in places where he should not be. In many productions of the opera, he is treated as a person with no sentiments, but only very intense bodily desires. Let us, however, pay closer attention to what he says and what he does.

Cherubino is clearly, in crucial ways, masculine. He is tall (Susanna has to ask him to kneel down so that she can put on his bonnet), good-looking (Figaro and the Count are both jealous of him), and sexually active (with his teenage girlfriend Barbarina). But he has been educated by women and by music: the prospect of military service appalls him, and singing, by contrast, comes naturally. How, then, do his emotions differ from those of all the male-voice characters in the opera?

He talks about love. He is the only male in the opera (before the last act, at any rate) who has the slightest interest in that emotion. Certainly, the breathlessness of his first aria, “Non so più cosa son,” expresses the promiscuous quality, as well as the confusion, of adolescent infatuation. But it also contains romantic sentiments. The musical idiom, breathless and yet tender, is utterly unlike the tense accents of the adult males. When we reach the Countess’s chamber, Cherubino’s difference from other males becomes even more evident. Deeply infatuated with the Countess, he has decided to make her a present. What sort of present? What naturally occurs to him is to write a poem, set it to music, and sing it himself.

The content of that passion (in the beautiful Act Two aria, “Voi che sapete”) is remarkable for its utter difference from the arias of all the other males. First of all, Cherubino simply talks about love, and about its beautiful female object. He has nothing to say about other men, and he seems utterly impervious to questions of honor, shame, and competition. Second, he is eager to learn something, and he is eager to learn it from women: “You who know what sort of thing love is, women, tell me whether that is what I have in my heart.” Third, unlike all the other males, he is utterly vulnerable, and he makes no attempt to conceal his vulnerability. Finally, and most remarkably, he locates what he is pursuing in a place outside of his own ego: “I seek a good that is outside myself.” Hearing these words, we realize that no other male in the opera does seek a good outside himself: all are preoccupied with shielding the ego from shame. The music of the aria would tell us all this without the words. Here, if anywhere, Mozart’s music moves well beyond Da Ponte’s text.

How did Cherubino get to be this way, a way that promises real reciprocity in passion? Answer: he was brought up by women and kept a stranger to the men’s world. I would argue that he is therefore the opera’s pivotal character, a male who can be both delightful and loving, a harbinger of new possibilities for men and women.

How, then, do things end? In particular, what happens when the Count begs his wife for forgiveness? Temporarily, at least, the male world yields before the female world, asking for pardon. And then there is a pause. And what, in this silence, might the Countess be thinking, before she says “Yes”?

If she has any sense – and we know that she has a great deal – she will be thinking, “What on earth does this promise of renewed love really mean? Has this man, who has behaved badly for years, really become a new person just because our joke succeeded and he is publicly embarrassed?" And when, like the sensible woman she is, she gives herself the answer, "Surely not," then she must think again, asking herself, "But then, shall I accept him as he is, with his arrogance, his status-consciousness, his anxiety-driven infidelities? Shall I agree to live with just the hope or promise, and the occasional reality, of reciprocal love?"

When, then, after that pause, she answers "I am nicer, and I say yes," with a phrase that arcs downward, as if to touch him, she is saying yes to the imperfection in all their lives, accepting the fact that love, if frequently real, will always be uneven and far from blissful; that people will never get the entirety of what they long for; that even if men are capable of learning from women – and both Figaro and the Count have learned at least something – nonetheless we hardly have reason to expect these achievements to be stable, given the pressures culture and upbringing exert on human development. Indeed, it seems far more likely that Cherubino will be corrupted by the male world around him than that the other men will drop their quest for honor and status and learn to sing like Cherubino. The aversion to shame and the narcissistic desire for control are profoundly human; they are unlikely to go away, yielding a world in which all lovers get everything they want.

So, when she says that "yes," she is agreeing to love, and even trust, in a world of inconstancy and imperfection – an affirmation requiring more courage than any of the battlefield exploits mentioned by Figaro in "Non più andrai."

And here's where we arrive at politics, at a subtler and deeper level. What the Countess agrees to, here, is also what the ensemble also agrees to: "Ah, all of us will be happy in that way." What that seems to mean is that all present say yes to a world that seeks and aims at reciprocity, respect, and attunement without being starry-eyed about perfection, a world in which people commit themselves to liberty, fraternity, and equality, while understanding that these transcendent ideals are not to be attained by exiting from the real world into a pristine world, but rather by pursuing them in this one, in episodes of love and craziness.

Four generations of superb Cherubinos: (top to bottom) Jarmila Novotná at the Metropolitan Opera and Teresa Berganza, Frederica von Stade, and Joyce DiDonato at Lyric Opera.

Life together in society requires something like an unjaundiced trust in the possibility of love (at least sometimes and for a while), and, perhaps above all, a sense of humor about the world as it is.

These ideas of trust and reconciliation are not clear in the text, but only in the music. But Mozart's music is not in some unattainable heaven, it is in the middle of our world, and in the bodies of those who sing it. It reshapes the world by reshaping breath itself. "This day of torment, of craziness, of foolishness – only love can make it end in happiness and joy." Indeed.

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

I saw my first Figaro a long time ago. It was at the Metropolitan Opera, and I went with my grandmother. I remember loving the music, and feeling so much joy and passion from it – despite the fact that, in truth, I wasn't seeing that onstage! It was a dark and distant production, without much interaction between the characters. I remember then listening to the music after I saw the opera and banishing the visual memories. It was the music that I remembered.

When Anthony Freud asked me to direct Figaro, I thought, "I'll give it the love and the life and the passion that I didn't see all those years ago. I'll stage this opera the way the music makes me feel"

– and you can't get to the fourth act of Figaro without feeling you're in heaven! The gods have descended, and it's simply a feast of joy, love, harmony and grace. Yes, the Count will probably fool around again, but he and the Countess will never leave each other – they share a bond of love despite their frailties. My thought was to give it the joy – after much confusion.

The opera's action takes place over 24 hours, things happen at the speed of lightning, and people's passions are combustible. It is here that the comedy lies, because, in all honesty, we're all quite combustible when we fall in love. I want to reveal what we feel when we're hit with the extreme emotions – both of love and jealousy.

This is not a stylized production because Mozart's opera is deeply connected to human behavior. How would you respond if you were in that particular situation? The singers know their roles better than I ever can, so I'll ask them to share what would be in their hearts if they were in the same position as their characters. What would you do if you found your lover with someone else? What would you do if you wanted to get your lover back? How would you behave if you loved someone who refused to pay attention to you? These are the questions I ask myself – and the answers are all within the music and the souls of the singers. Everything Mozart composed is rooted in the truth of our all-too-human behavior.

Act Three of Lyric Opera's new production, designed by James Noone

I love how this entire opera is focused (as we often are...) upon whether someone is sleeping with somebody or not, and whether they will sleep with somebody or not. Marcellina wants to sleep with Figaro, and she's going to make him marry her. Figaro and Susanna are both eager to get married to each other, and the Count has a seemingly endless appetite for anyone wearing a skirt. And then there's the Countess, who is heartbroken that her husband has lost interest in her. The whole second act takes place on and around our 25-foot-wide bed, with a headboard and footboard you can sit on. I hope we're going to surprise the audience within our new world. People will be sitting, standing, reclining, singing on that bed quite a lot. The action is inspired by the music, with Mozart serving as our chief collaborator (among a large team of brilliant artistic and technical collaborators here "on the ground" at the Lyric).

For Act Four, the night scene in the garden, Mozart places all his principals in the dark, moving and hiding from one another; a few must never be seen by the others. It's a challenging scene in terms of stage direction, but I believe there's the potential to find humor and much poignancy within the scene's inherent farce, as the garden statues represent lovers who have travelled the same emotional journeys in their lives as our characters do now – and as we have, too.

I want to make this exquisite exploration of our human nature believable, and to celebrate the magic of music and the wonder of love. After a mysterious night of madness, we hope that love and forgiveness will heal all of our hearts. If I had one wish for this Figaro, it would be this: that everyone leaves the Civic Opera House tonight on Cloud Nine. There could be no greater gift.

Maria C. Green: Upholding a Legacy

If one were searching for an example of a thriving partnership, they would need look no further than the relationship between Illinois Tool Works and Lyric Opera of Chicago. With more than three decades of annual, special project, and production giving, ITW is one of Lyric's most generous corporate supporters. As sponsors of the Opera Ball annually since 2002, ITW has played a vital role in cementing an important tradition in Lyric's season. ITW's cosponsorship of mainstage opera productions dates back to The Pearl Fishers in the 1997-98 season, and the company has contributed to such special events as the triennial Wine Auction and Lyric's celebratory 50th and 60th Anniversary Galas. ITW has invested in Lyric's future by supporting the Building on Greatness Capital Campaign and the Breaking New Ground Campaign.

Currently at the forefront of ITW's relationship with Lyric is Maria Green, Senior Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of the century-old global manufacturing giant, who serves on Lyric's Board of Directors, Executive and Lyric Unlimited Committees.

Maria follows a long line of respected leaders from ITW to serve on Lyric Opera's Board of Directors, humbly filling the vacancy left by ITW's late Chairman and CEO, David Speer. "I was honored when Scott [Santi] asked me to take over the seat on the Board for ITW. I was very close to David, and in a small way, I feel I am continuing the legacy." Other esteemed ITW representatives still serving on Lyric's Board include retired ITW Chairmen and CEOs W. James Farrell and John D. Nichols, as well as ITW Lead Director Robert S. Morrison.

A shared personal appreciation for Lyric Opera with husband Greg Lewis preceded Maria's appointment to the Board of Directors. "My mother-in-law Vivian Lewis has been a subscriber since she was in her thirties – more than 50 years!" And although no one in her childhood household was musically inclined, Maria was fortunate enough to have access to exceptional live theater starting from a young age. "When I was growing up in New York City, my mother used to take me down to the Hot Tix booth in lower Manhattan, and back then you could get tickets for about five dollars. I saw a lot of Broadway shows that way, like Oklahoma! and Annie Get Your Gun. Occasionally we got discount tickets to the Met, too. As a little girl, the pomp and circumstance of being in a theater, getting dressed up and seeing a live performance, it really influenced me."

Valued at ITW for her thoughtful approach to management and her dedication to seeing a deal through to the end, Maria is a tenacious yet admired corporate executive. Her genuine love of opera is the "cherry on top" which makes her an ideal board member and corporate advocate for Lyric Opera. "ITW has an awareness that there are fewer and fewer landmark companies in Chicago, and we feel we have a duty to be front and center in the arts and to fund the cultural things that go on in this city. Additionally, to be able to support something that was important to the Smith family [who founded ITW and loved opera] helps us to feel more a part of the legacy of the company."

When asked how ITW's long-standing support might translate to corporations who are not yet involved with Lyric Opera, Maria explains, "For a corporation it is all about enhancing your brand and determining what the value is for your company. At ITW, we talk about the principle of 80/20, where 80% of your revenue comes from 20% of your customers, or 80% of your income is attributed to 20% of the products you sell. So our approach is to focus on that small percentage of customers or products that will yield the biggest return, and I think we take the same approach when we talk about supporting the arts. Through our long-standing relationship with Lyric, we see the value from our perspective, and we see the importance of focusing on just a few things that will yield the results we are looking for." Lyric is proud to uphold its end of the partnership by striving to be the great North American opera company, garnering attention from around the world for its acclaimed productions and innovation through its Lyric Unlimited initiatives. "ITW is a global company. Over 50% of our revenue comes from outside the U.S., so we are constantly being mindful of the fact that we are not just U.S. based. That Lyric is thinking not just about how to be the best company in Illinois or the best company in the U.S., but how to be viewed as a global company is very consistent of how we think of ourselves.

Greg Lewis and Maria Green

"I had the good fortune of being on vacation in Italy and while we were in Venice, we attended an opera. While we were waiting for the opera to begin, I started a conversation with someone sitting next to me, and upon hearing we were from Illinois, the gentleman asked whether we saw a lot of opera there. When I told him that I was on the Board of Lyric, he had heard great things about the company. I was really blown away by that. Lyric's effort to be viewed more globally is clearly having some success."

A CAMPAIGN FOR LYRIC |

For sixty years, Lyric Opera of Chicago has produced world-class opera with many of the world's greatest artists. With decades of dedicated support from donors and subscribers, the company has flourished, gaining global recognition for its artistic excellence and fiscal stability.

Building our reputation for the future will rely on continued commitment to the broad, deep, and relevant cultural service we provide to our city, while also advancing the development of opera as a vital art form. Lyric is seizing new opportunities to present opera at the highest level, re-define our audiences, and enhance our infrastructure.

The Breaking New Ground Campaign was launched in January 2013 to implement the company's blueprint for a world-class, twenty-first century opera company. Breaking New Ground allows Lyric to continue to produce major productions of the highest caliber while also modernizing the stage of the Ardis Krainik Theatre with state-of-the-art equipment. The Campaign also contributes toward updated media, marketing and audience development programs, and strengthens the company's financial position, including continued efforts to build Lyric's endowment in accordance with industry best practice.

Lyric Opera is grateful to the following donors who have made generous contributions to the Campaign as of August 1, 2015.

Facilities and Services

The management of Lyric Opera of Chicago earnestly requests patrons to preserve complete silence during the performance. As a gesture of respect for all other audience members as well as for our artists onstage and in the pit, patrons are asked to remain seated until an act or the opera is completely over.

The management reserves the right to refuse admittance or remove any person who may create a disturbance. Patrons are urgently reminded to check that their cellular phones, pagers, and electronic beepers (including watches) are SWITCHED OFF before the performance begins.

Perfumes, hairsprays, colognes, and other body lotions should be avoided or used sparingly when attending the opera, as allergies are commonplace.

Noise from theater elevators may disturb patrons in the auditorium during the performance. We therefore respectfully ask that the elevators only be used before performances, at intermission, and after performances have concluded, except in cases of emergency. Your understanding and cooperation are appreciated.

TICKETS The Civic Opera House Box Office (at the corner of Wacker and Madison) is open from noon to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from noon through the first intermission on performance days. During season, Lyric Opera's phone sales staff is on duty from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, and from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on Saturday. On performance evenings and matinees, our phone lines are open until curtain time. Call (312) 332-2244, ext. 5600, for ticket information. Should you need to visit the Ticket Department, we are located at 20 N. Wacker Drive, Suite 840, Chicago, IL 60606. Hours are 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. Buy tickets online anytime via Lyric Opera's website, www.lyricopera.org.

Should you be unable to attend a performance, we would greatly appreciate you donating your tickets to Lyric Opera. We can accept your ticket donation as late as five minutes prior to curtain at (312) 827-5600, or donate your tickets online up to four hours prior to curtain at lyricopera.org/donatetickets. You may also mail or fax your ticket donation — the fax number is (312)332-8120. Donating your ticket(s) as soon as possible will increase our chances of reselling them. A personalized statement of all ticket donations will be sent to you in January for the previous calendar year.

Attention Box-Seat Holders: In order for each party seated in your box to have equivalent front-of-box seating opportunities for all performances throughout the season, Lyric asks that you agree upon an equitable seating rotation plan with your neighbors seated within your box. Please remember that you may need to adjust your front-of-box seating expectations in consideration of patrons who do not regularly sit in your box and therefore are unaware of any previous arrangements.

The use of a ticket acknowledges a willingness to appear in photographs taken for print, television, or film in the public areas of the theater and releases Lyric Opera of Chicago from liability resulting from the use of such photographs. The program and artists are subject to change without notice.

For patrons attending the pre-performance lectures, the doors will open 75 minutes before curtain.

CAMERAS, recording equipment, food, and beverages are not allowed in the seating area of the Civic Opera House. For the safety and comfort of our audience, management reserves the right to have all large parcels, backpacks, luggage, etc. checked in the Civic Opera House checkrooms.

FIRST AID In case of illness or injury, please inform an usher, who will call the house manager and house doctor for assistance.

PATRONS WITH DISABILITIES The Opera House is accessible to physically disabled persons with elevator service to all floors except the Opera Club. The Ardis Krainik Theatre contains seating that is accessible to persons in wheelchairs, as well as seats with removable armrests. The Opera House has automatic door-openers on exterior doors, and accessible drinking fountains and public telephones. A TTY phone is available in the Box Office for outgoing calls only.

Restroom facilities for female patrons with disabilities are located on all levels of the Opera House except the Opera Club level. For male patrons, these facilities are located on all levels except the Opera Club level and the sixth floor.

Assistive listening devices for persons desiring amplification are available at no cost at any open checkroom. A valid driver's license, state identification, or major credit card is required as a security deposit.

High-powered opera glasses for the visually impaired are available at no cost at the checkroom on the main floor. A valid driver's license, state identification, or major credit card is required as a security deposit. Also, large format programs are available for every performance..

For additional information or questions, call (312) 332-2244, ext. 5600.

DINING options are available before, during (intermission), and after most Lyric Opera performances on the main and third floor of the Civic Opera House. Refreshments are also available throughout most lobby areas on each floor and on the Opera Club level. Visit lyricopera.org/dine for complete details. Outside food and beverages may not be brought into the Civic Opera House.

NO SMOKING POLICY In compliance with the City of Chicago ordinance, Lyric Opera of Chicago enforces a no smoking policy throughout the Opera House and within 15 feet of our theatre entrances. Thank you for your cooperation.

LATECOMERS will not be seated once the performance has begun. Patrons who must leave will not be re-admitted during the performance. These patrons must remain in the lobby until a suitable break, which is usually the next intermission. There is no standing room. Evening performances of Tanhäuser begin PROMPTLY at 6:00 p.m., except for Friday, May 2, which begins at 8:00 p.m. Matinee performances of Tanhäuser begin PROMPTLY at 1:00 p.m.

PHONES As a courtesy to our patrons, complimentary phone service is available in the Vaughan Family Hospitality Foyer.

LOST AND FOUND Please telephone (312) 827-5768 for lost items. Unclaimed articles are held for 30 days.
