From the General Director

Welcome to Lyric Opera of Chicago! We're thrilled that you're here, and we hope you're as excited about Das Rheingold and the rest of the season as we are.

As with every Lyric season, in 2016-17 the individual operas offer something for everyone. The totality of these works will provide a sense of a journey, exploration, and discovery, as well as reacquaintance with longtime favorites.

We're very conscious of the fact that many audience members at Lyric will be giving opera a try for the first time. For them, those favorites will actually be works heard for the first time – some of the most popular and famous operas in the repertoire. We offer opportunities for our opera “newbies” to discover exactly why those operas are so popular and famous!

Incredible as it may seem, our new production of Das Rheingold marks the first time in Lyric's history that the company has launched a new season with a work of Richard Wagner. How fitting that the work produced for this momentous occasion should be the first opera of the monumental Ring cycle. There is no more ambitious, large-scale, or exciting venture that an opera company can undertake than a new Ring. We're producing the four operas that comprise the cycle in four consecutive years, culminating with the complete cycle in 2020.

Das Rheingold is an ideal first opera. It has the running time of a movie, as well as a fantastic, action-packed story based in myth but with enormous contemporary resonance (think Star Wars or The Lord of the Rings). In every scene we can enjoy some of the most explosive, exciting, climactic music ever written. From the opening subterranean E-flat chord representing the River Rhine to the gods' majestic entrance into Valhalla at the opera's climax, the cumulative effect of Wagner's music and drama is simply overwhelming.

The creators of our new Ring are the same team that brought us The Passenger two seasons ago. Anyone who saw that unforgettable production will share our anticipation of an extraordinary theatrical spectacle in this Ring, with powerfully intense storytelling and detailed, passionate performances.

In planning Lyric seasons, a new Ring has been a major priority both for me and for our music director, Sir Andrew Davis. Over the past 15 years at Lyric, Andrew has brought enormous distinction to his conducting of all the greatest operas of Wagner. His remarkable affinity for this repertoire has been inspiring for our audiences. The Ring he conducted here in 2004-05 ranks as one of Lyric's greatest achievements in recent decades, and I know that this success will be repeated in Das Rheingold and the other three Ring operas.

Heading our cast of top-flight Wagner interpreters is Eric Owens, who appeared at Lyric most recently in Porgy and Bess and has already proven himself a very impressive Alberich in Ring cycles at the Met and in Europe. We're excited to be presenting his first Wotan, a major milestone in his career. Samuel Youn, our Alberich, is a remarkable Korean bass-baritone whom I've much admired in such portrayals as Wagner's Dutchman and Berlioz's Méphistophélès. His engagement at Lyric marks both his American debut and role debut.

Four other major artists are debuting at Lyric in this production: Tanja Ariane Baumgartner (Fricka), a consummate singing actress whose career has taken her all over Europe; and three outstanding artists whom I've enjoyed onstage numerous times – Okka von der Damerau (Erda), Wilhelm Schwinghammer (Fasolt), and Tobias Kehrer (Fafner). We're also very happy to welcome back Štefan Margita, our Loge, who was a marvelously devious Shuisky in Lyric's most recent Boris Godunov.

The Ring adventure is beginning. Enjoy!

STEVE LEONARD

From the President

The 2016-17 season here at Lyric Opera of Chicago is going to be one of the most exciting in recent memory, and my wife and I are looking forward to every production. I expect you are, too.

I'm particularly excited about the launch of the new Ring cycle with Das Rheingold. The first time I experienced the complete Ring, I wondered, as with many Ring neophytes, if this was just going to be four very long nights in a dark room! But I found that it is spellbinding, and that the longest of the operas seems to slip away in minutes. It's a profound, transformative experience, and the fact that we're creating a brand-new expression of the Ring makes me very proud of the artistic choices we've made at Lyric.

It's likely that the production you're enjoying tonight is benefiting from an ambitious stage-improvement project, the first step of which was implemented over the summer. Three new stage lifts, a turntable, and 16 new point hoists (individual motorized lines that can lift sets or people in the air) are enabling us to present Das Rheingold, Les Troyens, and The Magic Flute. None of those new productions would have been possible were it not for that initial investment. Over the next two years we will see the second phase of the project, including additional stage lifts and point hoists, plus various other crucial technical capabilities. This will ensure our being able to present future productions exactly as our directors have imagined them, and in a safe, efficient manner. We're exceedingly grateful to our Breaking New Ground campaign donors whose generosity has made this possible.

Along with our investments backstage to enable these amazing productions, we are also investing in the front of the house to enhance your experience at Lyric. New concierge greeters in the lobby, additional ticket scanners to improve traffic flow, and better signage for our first-time guests are just a few of the changes you'll be experiencing this season. We are looking for fresh ways to make your total Lyric experience a delight, from the moment you purchase your ticket until you depart after a wonderful performance.

The future of opera and of Lyric is dependent not only on the loyalty of our longtime audience members, but also on our ability to cultivate the next generation. As we all know, "millennials" have many more opportunities for entertainment and cultural consumption than ever before. In achieving our goal of continually attracting and engaging younger audiences, we've embraced the types of media that they're familiar with. Many of you who spend time online, particularly in social media, have noticed in the past year many more banner ads for Lyric productions or mentions and "likes" on Facebook and Twitter and photos on Instagram. I'm delighted to see social media channels bringing greater awareness of Lyric and its exciting offerings to a whole new audience.

I use Lyric's website on a regular basis, whether to provide background information for an upcoming production or to review the biography of an artist I don't know. It's not unusual for me to snap a picture of a current production banner and post it on my Facebook page!

This season has so much to offer, from the Ring to Les Troyens to a new Magic Flute. The richness and diversity of opera and the world-class quality of our orchestra, chorus, and artists remind us how valuable and exciting the Lyric experience is and how fortunate we are to have an opera company of this caliber in the city of Chicago.

Why I Love Opera ... and Why I Love Lyric

TODD ROSENBERG

Diana Newman (Clorinda), Alessandro Corbelli (Don Magnifico), and Annie Rosen (Tisbe) in last season's Lyric production of Cinderella, which was so enjoyed by Maria Enriquez and her daughter.

MAKING OPERA A FAMILY EVENT

It was the first time that my nine-year-old daughter Priscilla went to the opera! I remember so well getting ready, looking sharp. She even wanted to wear my perfume. Hey, why not?! A little makeup, too...and the black dress with sequins! Off we go, downtown – a glamorous evening, just the two of us! Cinderella was playing that night, except this time the real Cinderella was my nine-year-old Priscilla...

The Audience Speaks: PART 1

Edited by Roger Pines

For the first time in the Lyric program, we've given the Lyric audience a chance to reveal why they love opera – and why they love Lyric.

This is the first in a four-part series. If you'd like to contribute, send your comments to: MyLyricMemories@lyricopera.org

GREAT CUSTOMER SERVICE

I have enjoyed most every Lyric Opera presentation I've seen. Wonderful singing, excellent repertory, incredible orchestra. Lately the stagings have been better and better. Did I mention the star power?

And....would you believe, one of the things I like most of all about Lyric are your telephone salespeople. They are knowledgeable to a fault. Flexible. I love talking to them, even if I don't buy anything. They certainly aren't in it for the money, but they love opera, love talking about opera, romancing opera, and are huge fans. I love every one of them. :)

George Kriza
(Willow Springs)

Thank you so much, George! Everyone in our telephone sales force loves their work, and clearly it shows. Great pains are taken to give Lyric patrons all the attention and consideration they deserve, so it's wonderful to read of your gratitude.

Susan Harrison Niemi
Deputy Director – Audience Services

Martin J. Hughes of Lyric's part-time audience services staff.

As an undergraduate at Indiana University, I initially fell in love with opera for the passion displayed onstage by amazing, versatile performers. Now, living in Chicago I love Lyric not only for this reason, but also for the individuals behind the scenes. This past season, after experiencing an unpleasant evening at one of the performances, Martin Hughes from Audience Services called to assess my interest in renewing my subscription. After explaining my experience and that I was considering not renewing, he took it upon himself to remedy the situation.

MY MOST EXCITING EVENING AT LYRIC

The very first opera I attended with my newly purchased subscription was Luisa Miller some time in the late '70s. I was thrilled to be there, and even more excited because Luciano Pavarotti was singing at a time when he had cancelled many performances. His voice was spellbinding, but there was more to come. During the last curtain call, a cake was wheeled out to center stage, to the surprise of Pavarotti. The entire audience joined with the cast and orchestra to sing "Happy Birthday" to this great tenor. I can't imagine a more exciting introduction to opera, and my enthusiasm for Lyric continues to this day.

Claire Levenberg
(Chicago)

Last season's Romeo and Juliet, a Lyric production enjoyed by Sanam Shafii-Mousavi.

Within an hour he called back and offered two tickets for any of the upcoming performances (amazing seats for Romeo and Juliet). He didn't leave it at that, though; in fact, he said that he had spoken to his director and they were addressing the issues to ensure they would not happen to others. Martin even maintained contact with me up through and after the date of the performance. Individuals like Martin have given me a greater appreciation for Lyric, both for the performers on stage and those behind the scenes. Thank you for the amazing customer service!

Sanam Shafii-Mousavi
(Evanston)

Thank you truly, Sanam, for your generous words. It's certainly a pleasure to assist patrons as grateful as you are. All of us in Audience Services hope you enjoy all the operas this season!

Martin J. Hughes, Audience Services Staff

A DIVERSE AUDIENCE

I love opera! The music is exhilarating, the performers and orchestra so talented, and it is amazing to see the time and dedication put into the shows.

I am very impressed with Lyric Opera as an organization; it is constantly working on diversifying the audience. Over the years Lyric has worked hard to diversify the audience in all demographics, and most impressive is how often young adults are now attending the shows. I have lived and worked in Chicago for almost 30 years, and it was only five years ago that I started attending performances at Lyric. Each season you encounter someone who is attending opera for the first time. I have also made a point to bring someone who is experiencing opera for this first time; this season it is my mother, who is 81!

Kamana Mbekeani
(Oak Park)

It's wonderful to read your comments, Kamana! I love being a part of someone's first opera experience! I have brought both teens and adults to their first opera, and always enjoy their reactions. All of us in Lyric's Youth Opera Council are continually encouraging everyone we know to come to opera performances. That has a lot to do with the number of young people that you're now seeing in the audience. We're so glad you've noticed, and we're confident that those numbers will keep growing!

Eve Moyar, age 17

Youth Opera Council member

LYRIC IS WORLD CLASS

Why do I love opera? Why do I love Lyric? Let me count the myriad ways. Do you have the time, the patience? This might take many days! Over four decades I've been a singer in countless great choral productions, as well as in semi-staged operas, such as Carmen, Turandot, Faust...to name but a few. I've even been a supernumerary, serving as crafty, clever innkeeper in Falstaff... with lots of fun things to do. I've been to opera performances all over the globe: in Nürnberg, Munich, Berlin, Bayreuth, Essen, Düsseldorf, Dresden, Barcelona, San Francisco, New York, Chicago, Toronto... and that's only part of "the score."

Why do I love Lyric? It's superb! It's great! It's world class! It's convenient! It's close! Need I say more? These facts and other reasons will cause me to come to the Lyric, hopefully, joyfully, expectantly, gladly... for many more seasons!

INSPIRED BY BEAUTIFUL MEMORIES

"Yesterday and today..." A young high-school student registers for a required music appreciation class. The class boasted about singing, listening to and identifying an assortment of music selections, identifying composers and performing at select school events. A young, inspiring, and enthusiastic new music teacher shares her passion with a class of mildly interested students about opera, obviously her favorite genre. The teacher's enthusiasm becomes contagious and permeates the class. The semester soon ends with the teacher's parting comments, "Tomorrow you will appreciate what we experienced in this class!" After 35 years of attending Lyric Opera of Chicago, her voice and words continue to resonate. The music teacher? Ardis Krainik. She left so much of herself to be remembered. Yesterday, today and tomorrow....

A SPECIAL JOY

The English poet John Keats said, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." His words are prophetic for me.

Every time I attend a performance at Lyric Opera, I experience joy! It begins when I enter the magnificent lobby and queue up with the people who have come to pay homage to the world of opera. The music, the arias, the costumes, the story.

Kismet, perhaps? And I am not referring to the Broadway musical of the same name....

Lyric Theatre of Chicago (later Lyric Opera) and I were born a mere 20 days apart; myself on January 15, 1954, and Lyric with its "calling card" production of Don Giovanni on February 5 of that year. I will spare you all the recollections of my soon-to-be 44th year as a continuous, devoted subscriber. What I will share is the first opera of my first season as a subscriber in September 1972, at the tender age of 17: I due Foscari, a Verdi masterpiece conducted by the cherished Bruno Bartoletti, with Michael Lepore's astounding chorus, featuring Piero Cappuccilli and the American debut of Katia Ricciarelli.

That production shall always remain in memory as a night of great opera. I was transported/transformed by the beauty; the sets, costumes, and lighting evoking Renaissance Italy and Miss Ricciarelli (golden of voice and coiffure) as if out of a painting by Raphael. I won't ever say "those were the days..." too many treasured memories of artists and productions...but these are "the days," as far as I am concerned! Renée Fleming, Dmitri Hvorostovsky, Deborah Voigt, Jonas Kaufmann, Sondra Radvanovsky, Matthew Polenzani, Amber Wagner, Sophie Koch, Christine Goerke, Eric Owens, Mariusz Kwiecień, Piotr Beczala, Anna Netrebko....

Thank you, Lyric Opera, with hearty applause, for making my life so very rewarding.
Kenneth Chrzastek
(Chicago)

Dear Kenneth – My experiences at Lyric have all been special moments in my career, and I'm hugely looking forward to returning this season for my first Wotan in the new Ring cycle. I feel very gratified to be included in the group of singers you've cited. All of us take great pride in performing at Lyric, particularly when those listening are as appreciative as you are. Enjoy the 2016-17 Lyric season!
Eric Owens, bass-baritone

Every performance is a mini-vacation, a multi-sensory feast, a magical ride on a merry-go-round, a timeless story to soothe the soul.

We are blessed to live in Chicago. Lyric Opera is a treasure beyond words.

WORTH A TRIP FROM ACROSS THE WORLD

TODD ROSENBERG

My love of Lyric Opera of Chicago began in April 2005, when I first journeyed from Auckland, New Zealand, to hear Wagner’s Ring cycle, conducted by Sir Andrew Davis.

The long journey was amply rewarded with a memorable experience, marrying great singing and orchestral playing with remarkable staging and direction, plus the bonus of English surtitles!

The following year I returned eagerly to the Lyric to hear Gluck’s opera Orfeo ed Euridice, beautifully sung by David Daniels and strikingly staged in silhouette!

After too long an absence I returned to Chicago in 2014 to hear the wonderful Renée Fleming and Jonas Kaufman in an unforgettable gala concert, and the lovely Joyce DiDonato in Mozart’s timeless La clemenza di Tito.

Chicago residents will find nothing to surprise them in my enthusiasm for the city’s wonderful Lyric Opera, and other cultural venues. But you should know that their quality reaches to the far end of the world and, like a magnet, draws one back!

Bryan Sayer
(Auckland, New Zealand)

Dear Bryan – Thank you so much for making those long trips from New Zealand! I’m very glad to know that the 2005 Ring inspired you to return to Lyric on other occasions. Do come back for the individual Ring operas and again for our complete cycle in 2020. I’m Down Under quite frequently, as chief conductor of the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra – I hope you’ll come hear performances there, as well as in Chicago!

Sir Andrew Davis, music director and principal conductor

MY MOST TRAGIC EVENING AT LYRIC

A number of years ago, I lived in Warren, Illinois, in Jo Daviess County, in the northwest corner of the state. On opera nights, I would drive two hours to Elgin and take the train from there into Union Station, going back the same way after the opera. One night, Catherine Malfitano was singing Madama Butterfly (beautifully and movingly!), and I could see that, if I were to hear her final aria and stay to the end of the opera, I would miss my 10:30 train. The next train didn’t leave until 12:30, getting me back home at nearly 4:00 a.m. As Butterfly began to sing “Tu, tu, tu, tu, tu!” I slipped quietly up the aisle, suffering, I thought, as much as Butterfly, because I was missing what I knew would be the very climax of an incredible performance.

Douglas Asbury
(Riverside)

P.S. I wish METRA officials were opera lovers and would time train departures to accommodate Lyric patrons.

Dear Douglas – I’m very touched to read your response to the Butterfly performance. It’s an opera that means a great deal to me, and I was thrilled to sing the title role at Lyric in both 1990-91 and 1997-98. All of us in that production gave our hearts to it, and it’s lovely to know that you remember it so well all these years later, even if you had to miss the end – for a very understandable reason, needless to say!

Synopsis

TIME AND PLACE: Legendary

Scene 1: The Rhine

Scene 2: An open space before Valhalla

Scene 3: Nibelheim

Scene 4: An open space before Valhalla

There will be no intermission.

Scene 1. Woglinde and Wellgunde are guarding the gold at the bottom of the Rhine. Flosshilde chides them for negligence when the Nibelung dwarf Alberich appears. The Rhinemaidens quickly realize that lechery has brought the Nibelung to their domain. Sunlight illuminates the gold, and Alberich questions them about it. Wellgunde reveals that the man who renounces love and forges a ring from it will be master of the world. Cursing love, Alberich seizes the gold and rushes away with it.

Scene 2. As Wotan awakens, he sees that his dream of a grand, imposing, beautiful, newly completed palace is realized. His wife, Fricka, is alarmed: now that the giants, Fasolt and Fafner, have completed the construction, the fee Wotan promised them must be paid – Fricka’s sister, Freia, goddess of youth and beauty. Wotan assures Fricka that he never seriously intended to sacrifice Freia.

When Freia pleads for protection from the giants, Wotan tells her that Loge, the demi-god of fire, has a plan to save her. The giants arrive, eager for their reward. Wotan suggests some other payment, but Fasolt warns him not to break their contract. The giants want Freia not only for herself, but also for her golden apples that ensure the gods’ eternal youth. When the giants attempt to take Freia with them, she summons her brothers, Donner and Froh, to her defense, but Wotan stifles the kindling violence.

When Loge finally appears, the giants repeat their demand. Loge relates how Alberich stole the gold. The gods and giants feel threatened by the Nibelung’s new power. After convincing Fafner that the gold is more valuable than Freia, Fasolt announces that the two will accept it instead of Freia. Loge tells Wotan that there is only one way to obtain the gold: theft. The giants will return for the gold that evening – meanwhile, they take Freia away as a hostage. Deprived of the apples, the gods begin to age and weaken. Wotan and Loge leave for Nibelheim, Alberich’s subterranean kingdom.

Scene 3. Alberich torments his brother Mime, who yields the magic helmet – the Tarnhelm – that Alberich had ordered him to forge. When Alberich dons the Tarnhelm and becomes invisible, he beats his brother mercilessly. Wotan and Loge find Mime groaning in pain. From him they learn that Alberich has enslaved the Nibelungs and forced them to mine the gold, from which the power-hungry dwarf has amassed an enormous hoard for himself.

Alberich ruthlessly drives his workers, but seeing the two gods, he is immediately suspicious. When he describes his helmet’s powers, Loge asks for a demonstration. Alberich then transforms himself first into a dragon, then a toad. Wotan swiftly captures the toad as Loge snatches the helmet. Alberich is restored to his original form and dragged away by the gods as a prisoner.

Scene 4. Wotan and Loge inform Alberich that he cannot regain his freedom unless he surrenders his treasures. Trusting the ring’s power to replenish his hoard, Alberich summons the Nibelungs, who appear carrying the gold. Alberich then learns that he must sacrifice the Tarnhelm. When forced to yield the ring, he curses it and whoever possesses it in the future. He leaves, free but powerless.

Fricka, Donner and Froh return, eager to learn the result of Wotan’s mission. The giants arrive with Freia, and Fasolt, who is giving her up reluctantly, demands that the gold be piled so that it will hide her. When her hair gleams through a chink in the pile, Fafner demands that the Tarnhelm fill the opening, but Fafner can still see one of Freia’s eyes. He demands that Wotan close the space with the Nibelung’s ring that the god is wearing on his finger, but Wotan refuses. The earth-goddess Erda appears, reminding Wotan of the curse. He then throws the ring on the pile and reclaims Freia. The giants soon quarrel over the ring, and Fafner kills his brother to possess it before departing with the treasure.

Donner invokes thunder and lightning to clear the sky, so that the gods can properly admire their new home. When it comes into view, Wotan is thrilled. Naming it “Valhalla,” he invites Fricka to dwell there with him. A rainbow bridge appears, and as the gods cross it, they hear the Rhinemaidens pleading for the return of their gold. Loge prophesies the end of the gods. Ordering Loge to silence the Rhinemaidens, Wotan leads the gods as they enter Valhalla with pomp and ceremony.

A Vote for Das Rheingold

By Richard Rothschild

From the sustained E-flat chord that opens the work in the depths of the Rhine to the final grand entrance of the gods into Valhalla, Das Rheingold is filled with musical glories. There is nonstop action, a rarity in Wagner operas, as the composer keeps the pedal to the metal.

Rheingold's brevity (about two and a half hours without intermission) yields a musical and dramatic urgency separating it from the later Ring operas. The momentum is constant – there's no looking back as in Wotan's lengthy monologue in Die Walküre, the Q & A session between Wotan and Siegfried in Siegfried, or the Norns' prolonged narrative that opens Götterdämmerung.

David Pountney, director of Lyric Opera of Chicago's new Ring cycle, has commented that Rheingold brings “wit, color and a vivid sense of storytelling...probably the best story of the four operas...It has a very good, fast-moving narrative structure.” Indeed, with its gods and giants, dwarves, and the aquatic sisters – as well as its brevity – Rheingold actually provides an inviting introduction to Wagner for youngsters, whose aural sensitivities may not be ready for the extended challenges of the later Ring operas, to say nothing of Tristan und Isolde or  Parsifal.

Although Das Rheingold – what Wagner described as a “Vorspiel” (prelude) to the Ring – doesn't include the cycle's best-loved and most recognizable melodies, it's a popular work in its own right and has continued to build audiences worldwide. There have been more than 100 performances of the opera in nearly 30 cities since the start of 2014 alone. This includes major houses in Bayreuth, Munich, Vienna, and Amsterdam but also lesser-known theaters in Bulgaria, Norway, South Korea, and Kazakhstan. Rheingold has ranked among the top 40 of the most-performed operas internationally for nearly all of the past decade, second only to The Flying Dutchman among Wagner's works and often ahead of such operatic staples as Norma, Der Rosenkavalier, Fidelio, Faust, and Salome.

Lyric

Emil Fischer as the Metropolitan Opera's first Wotan, 1889.

Wagner's Ring often has drawn comparisons to J.R.R. Tolkien's The Lord of Rings trilogy with Rheingold playing the role of The Hobbit, Tolkien's brief introduction to his epic saga. But Rheingold has far more meat on its bones than The Hobbit, which offers little more than an appetizer for the main course yet to come – despite director Peter Jackson's attempt to turn a short book into a three-movie extravaganza.

In Das Rheingold, Wagner establishes a musical vocabulary for the remainder of the Ring cycle, particularly the leitmotifs (signature themes) associated with characters, situations, and even particular objects through all four operas. Rheingold's music hints at events yet to come – for example, Loge's Scene Two narrative foreshadows the “Forest Murmurs” of Act Two in Siegfried. The thunderous music that accompanies Donner's calling to the mists in Scene Four reappears almost immediately in Die Walküre's opening measures as Siegmund dashes through a violent storm to escape

Wotan in Lyric's new production of Das Rheingold, costume design by Marie-Jeanne Lecca.

Hunding's kinsmen. And Erda's music that warns of the gods' ultimate doom returns at the very end of the tetralogy as Valhalla burns.

Throughout Das Rheingold the music feels new and fresh. Indeed, in the very first words of the opera, with the River Rhine flowing as if at the beginning of time, the Rhinemaiden Woglinde speaks of early childhood: “Surge, wave, make our cradle rock.” In effect, we are present at the creation.

Dramatically, this is an endlessly fascinating work as well. Unlike the subsequent Ring operas, most of the characters in Rheingold understand the high stakes, particularly once Alberich steals the gold from the Rhinemaidens and forges it into the all-powerful ring. And they know one another's back stories. The giant Fasolt, for example, says of Alberich, “The Nibelung has done [the giants] much harm.” Fricka dismisses the flirtatious Rhinemaidens, noting, “Let me hear nothing about that watery brood...many a lovesick man have they lured into the flood.”

The gods, about to cross the rainbow bridge into Valhalla. They are depicted in one of numerous sketches commissioned by Wagner from Viennese landscape artist Josef Hoffmann, and used as the basis for the designs of the first Bayreuth production in 1876.

In contrast, although audiences later in the cycle can applaud the brave innocence of Siegmund, Sieglinde, and their son Siegfried, these characters know next to nothing about their places in the larger drama. Even worse are Götterdämmerung's clueless Gibichung siblings, Gunther and Gutrune, maneuvered like puppets by Hagen, their villainous half-brother.

There are no small roles in Rheingold. Secondary characters such as Erda, Donner, and even the giants Fasolt and Fafner have moments of beauty, power, and eloquence. Erda, the primordial Earth goddess who seems to come from a long-ago epoch that geologists call Deep Time, warns Wotan in Scene Four to “flee the curse of the ring.” She lets him know that her three daughters, the Norns (an operatic precursor of the three precogs in Steven Spielberg's 2002 film Minority Report) weave the threat of destiny. Erda then adds ominously a “doom-laden day is dawning for the gods.” Although her music somewhat resembles that of the surging Rhine that opens the opera, this time it's in a minor key and far slower. Carolyn Abate and Roger Parker, in their authoritative survey A History of Opera, write, “It's as if the water has turned glacial.”

Another supporting character, Donner, the god of thunder, can make a monumental effect as well. Later in Scene Four he delivers his call to the mists. With a mighty hammer blow the god of thunder clears away the clouds and fog, allowing the gods a full view of Valhalla in its true splendor – certainly one of the most exciting passages in all Wagner.

The opera's three main characters, the chief god Wotan, the demigod of fire Loge, and the dwarf Alberich, take turns providing Rheingold with its twists and turns.

Wotan is a conflicted god who often acts more like a wheeler-dealer politician than a divine being. “He is a great figure, but, at the same time, he's flawed,” Pountney has noted. “Wotan is a very tormented and challenged person – politically, emotionally, sexually, and domestically.” And, for sure, Wotan will make some disastrous decisions throughout the Ring.

When John Updike wrote his famous essay in The New Yorker about Ted Williams's final game in 1960, he said of Williams's refusal to tip his cap to Red Sox fans at Fenway Park after hitting a home run in his last at-bat, “Gods do not answer letters.” Wotan gives the impression that not only does he answer letters – he probably reads the other gods' mail as well. He's not a bad fellow per se but his actions, particularly his dismissive treatment of his wife Fricka and his double-dealing with the giants regarding payment for the construction of Valhalla, often fail to position him in the best light.

Loge blends wit, intelligence, and cynicism. He likes to view himself as the smartest guy in the room or the brightest god on the mountaintop. Generously, he has been described as Wotan's secretary of state, the gods' ambassador to the world at large. But Loge is also a political fixer who spends much of his time cleaning up his boss's mess. His quicksilver music helps separate Loge from the other gods, who, other than Wotan, treat him with suspicion and regard him as an outsider. And yet this shape-shifter also has music of substantial beauty. His Scene-Two description of wandering the Earth to find a substitute for love sounds, in parts, like a Schubert song.

Alberich travels the longest journey. At the start of Das Rheingold, he's a playful albeit somewhat grubby dwarf who longs to frolic in the waves with the Rhinemaidens, telling them, "Ha, ha, you nymphs, how graceful you are." By opera's end he has become a breeder of evil and danger. After being dispossessed of the ring by Wotan he produces his awful curse: "Now [the ring's] magic shall breed death for him who wears it."

He despoils nature. When Alberich forswears loves and makes off with the magic gold at the end of Scene One the once-buoyant music of the Rhine turns dark as if the life-giving waters have receded, leaving a barren riverbed in its wake. Later in the opera, the subterranean kingdom of Nibelheim also suffers hard times under Alberich's lash. His brother Mime moans, "We used to laugh merrily as we worked." There are no laughs with Alberich calling the shots.

Lyric

Das Rheingold sits fifth among Wagner's mature operas, following by six years the completion of Lohengrin. Wagner composed the music to Das Rheingold in late 1853 through mid-1854, but it took another 15 years for the opera to receive its world premiere, September 22, 1869, in Munich. Two of Germany's most important artists of the time were heard in key roles – bass-baritone August Kindermann (Wotan) and tenor Heinrich Vogl (Loge).

Under the guidance of an accomplished conductor with top-flight singers and imaginative set designs, Das Rheingold's 150 minutes can pass quickly. And as the curtain prepares to lower, all appears well. With Wagner applying the full force of the orchestra, the gods cross the rainbow bridge into their new home of Valhalla, blissfully ignoring the pleas far below from the Rhinemaidens who seek the return of their gold.

A happy ending? Not really.

The crafty Loge notes, "[The gods] are hastening to their doom. I am almost ashamed to have any share in their doings." Pountney suggests Wagner is being ironic and that the music that many listeners regard as majestic also could be interpreted as "bombastic" or even "a lot of BS."

Yes, Valhalla provides a prestigious new address but the gods are ruling on borrowed time. Golden ages, be it the Age of Pericles, the summit of the British Empire, or what historians call The American High of 1946-64, rarely last long.

The latter three operas of the Ring cycle will find the gods less powerful and far less able to control events. Alberich's dire warning will carry through the years: "Keep the ring. Guard it well. You shall not escape my curse." This menacing dwarf will haunt Wotan and his offspring for the rest of the saga.

Never again will we see Donner, the rainbow god Froh, or the goddess of beauty Freia. Fricka appears for one scene in Act Two of Die Walküre and that's it. Erda emerges only briefly at the start of Act Three in Siegfried. Even Wotan is gone by Götterdämmerung. Loge becomes the Ring's silent partner. His fire – and music – surround Brünnhilde's rock in the final three operas but his voice is stilled.

The Twilight of the Gods has begun long before Götterdämmerung.

For the present, however, it's not bad to be an immortal in Valhalla. As Das Rheingold ends in apparent triumph, why not follow the words of Loge (sarcastic though they may be), who advises the Rhinemaidens: "If you no longer bask in the light of the gold, instead you can bask in the new-found radiance of the gods."

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Wagner's Ring cycle is based on adaptations of the High German "Nibelungenlied" (The Lay of the Nibelung) and the Norse sagas. These were originally aural texts, created for narration rather than reading. That gave us our first and most important clue: our Ring would primarily be an act of narration.

This is, you might say, in clear contrast to many contemporary versions of the Ring which are acts of interpretation.

Of course it is not possible to tell a story without simultaneously giving it some element of interpretation – we all like to pretend we are objective, but we are not. But the emphasis in our case will be to tell the story, rather than to tell you what the story means. That is your job to decide.

A narrator does two essential things: he tells you the story, and through the atmosphere, color, and passion of his story-telling, he encourages his listeners to suspend their disbelief, to become part of the story. Nonetheless, as you do suspend your disbelief, you are always in some corner of your mind aware that this is a story, and this is the storyteller.

So we set out with our designs to create a theatrical framework for the stage, which continually allows us to revert to its pristine, virginal condition: the empty stage. And on that empty stage we continually re-create the illusion in which you will believe, even though we will continually reveal to you, show you, demonstrate even, how the illusion is created. This is the magical pact between the storyteller and his audience, and who will deny that the story of The Ring of the Nibelung is one of the greatest stories ever told. "Are you sitting comfortably? Then I'll begin: Once upon a time..."

The interesting thing is that opera always has two narrators – the music and the stage, and this is the dichotomy that lies at the heart of all intelligent discussion about the authenticity, or otherwise, of productions. Our "naked" narration onstage is, you might think, at odds with the music, which is immersive, overwhelming, transporting, and richly, richly clothed. Wagner seeks through the heady, seductive hallucinatory power of his music to carry you through his story in a state of narcotic submission. But no staging can successfully copy, or double, that power. And two narrators working with the same high-octane fuel would be destructive, so our quieter, more playful, innocent, even naive narrative will fully allow the music its power and the story its purpose.

Within that framework, we were also aware that the entire Ring was a work which developed over a quarter of a century, and that as the text was written backwards, continually justifying current actions by historical motives, and the music was written forwards, we have in Rheingold the most radical dramaturgy – a fast-moving political cartoon – and the most (relatively!) conventional music (especially harmonically), whereas in the final work the dramaturgy is that of a 19th-century Grand Opéra while the music is that of a radical new music drama. Imagine a Verdi cycle that started with Nabucco and ended with Falstaff! This means that each work, although part of a clearly structured cycle, has its own unique qualities, and although our simple theatre framework remains constant, the styles with which we populate that empty stage change quite significantly over the four works.

After the "political cartoon" of Rheingold, Walküre is an Ibsenesque drama, much of which happens in domestic spaces, Siegfried is an ebullient and magical child's view of the world, and Götterdämmerung is a grand opera of love, betrayal and revenge.

Everyone of course emphasises the extraordinary dimensions of the Ring across time, space, orchestral, scenic, and vocal resources. So it is worth remembering that our sometimes-empty stage gives focus to an all important aspect: the huge sequence of deeply intimate, personal, emotional encounters. The incestuous lovers, Siegmund and Sieglinde, Wotan and his wife, Wotan and his daughter – an opera in themselves – Siegfried and his wicked "stepmother" Mime, Wotan and his surrogate hero, Siegfried, Siegfried and Brünnhilde – a fully operatic duet – Brünnhilde and her Valkyrie sister Waltraute, and on it goes. The Ring is partly a cycle of two-handed playlets!

We will also seem to be moving inexorably forward through time, as befits a saga conceived on such a grand scale. Rheingold deals with historical time when the gods were nomads but intent on walling themselves up in a pompous castle worthy of the Habsburgs, dressed to match, Alberich is turning from a clumsy, mocked seducer into an early industrialist, and Wotan is dreaming of Imperialist hegemony. In Walküre's bourgeois dwellings and palace corridors, the compromises of power come home to roost, whilst Siegfried romps through a childish landscape of innocence. Innocence is well and truly drowned in Götterdämmerung, in which we advance into a malevolent and dyspeptic view of the future. Does Brünnhilde's final sacrifice burn evil to ashes and wash the world clean? We must fervently hope so!

— David Pountney

Das Rheingold: After the Curtain Falls

When the performance is over, try discussing it with your companions and any other opera lovers you know! You can continue your pleasure in Das Rheingold for hours – even days – by exchanging ideas about it. Here are some topics we can suggest:

- What elements of the production, and what episodes in the music and drama, delighted you the most?
- In this opera, love seems to be everyone’s ultimate goal – until they get a glimpse of power. What is Wagner saying by making these two things mutually exclusive?
- Compare Wotan to other powerful figures in today’s world. How do their ruling-styles compare and differ?
- How did you experience the motion of the Rhine when you listened to Wagner’s prelude?
- Alberich is driven by passion and not intellect. How does that come across in the characterization? How does it affect his outcome?
- When looking at the end of the opera – the Rhinemaidens mourning the loss of their gold juxtaposed with gods’ enjoyment of it, a new home, and all of the power – what statement do you think Wagner could have been making?

BACKSTAGE LIFE: Up close and personal at Lyric

April Busch

What is your role here at Lyric, and how long have you held the position?

I've been the production manager here at Lyric for four years. I negotiate contracts for the designers of our productions and help plan their schedules. I also handle communication within the company if there are any special events occurring in the building, like board meetings or photo shoots. Anytime someone needs to have the crew (stage crew, wigs, makeup, wardrobe, props, carpenters, sound, and electricians) involved in something that isn't onstage, I help facilitate that as well.

What led you to work at Lyric?

I worked for San Francisco Opera for 14 years, and I was interested in getting back to my Midwestern roots. I'm originally from southern Indiana. When I was five years old, I came to Chicago during a family Christmas trip and I told myself I would live in Chicago one day. I love opera so much that in grad school at the Yale School of Drama, I wrote my thesis on how to plan and produce an opera season. And now I'm here!

What's a typical day like for you?

Every day is unique. I come in with a planned to-do list, and my day often takes me in completely different directions. I'm usually fielding requests, answering calls, or trying to find the answers to questions. I'm an information hub. My day can also include scheduling, budgeting, writing contracts, and coordinating where the crews need to go.

What's the most challenging aspect of your job?

Making sure communication between different groups and departments is accurate and up to date. From the technical department to the stage crew to the designers, I ensure that we all start and end on the same page. It's challenging, but we make it work! Communicating with designers that are based in different time zones (like Australia) is tough, too.

What keeps you committed to the work you do?

I love it because my job is hectic, and because it's never the same. I believe in the product, in opera, as an escape and as a therapy. It allows you to forget about your mortgage or world problems for a few hours and just listen to beautiful music.

What's something about your job that people might not know?

I handle all the scheduling of the safety trainings for the stage crew. It's my job to make sure they have appropriate safety licenses for any given production, such as CPR and fire-extinguisher training. I also deal with the fire marshal more than most people might expect. I have to obtain permits any time we use live flame onstage (at least four productions from the 2016-17 season will use fire), even if it's just for a candle.

A favorite Lyric moment?

The opening night of Rusalka during our 2013-14 season. It was such a beautiful, special show. I had never seen it before and it was magical. The music was gorgeous, and it made me proud to work here.

Beyond opera, what are your other passions?

I love to travel. It's great seeing yourself through other people's eyes and seeing how people in different places live. It really reaffirms your identity. Egypt was fascinating. Cambodia is on my travel bucket list.

Patricia and Jerry Frank: World Class Opera for a World Class City

For Pat and Jerry Frank, Lyric Opera is the best in the world. “We love this company, and we have watched it evolve over the 45 years we have been attending. I think it is getting better and better,” Jerry tells me as we sit down in one of Lyric’s backstage dressing rooms before a Ryan Opera Center scenes workshop this summer. “This season, not as far as which operas were being performed necessarily, but in the overall quality of the productions, was one of the best we have ever seen. There was also one I remember in the late 80s, but this past year was outstanding.”

Add a little hometown pride to their affinity for Lyric, and one can see why the Franks would never live anywhere else. “I would say that Lyric is one of the things that keeps us in Chicago year round,” Jerry says, and Pat wholeheartedly agrees. “Chicago is fine in the summer, and I like to garden and so we want to be here. It’s the wintertime we’d like to get away, but we can’t because everything we like to do in the city happens in the winter, especially the opera.”

One of the first things Pat and Jerry did when they were married in 1970 was subscribe to Lyric Opera. Tickets in the penultimate row of the upper balcony were three dollars each. It was another dollar to park, so the Franks were spending $56 for their eight opera series; as graduate students, this was almost their entire entertainment budget for the year. Although neither of them could claim to be avid opera fans at first – Jerry would have chosen the symphony, but that did not appeal to Pat – they were interested in sharing an enriching cultural experience together and committed to making the investment.

Jerry remembers occasionally listening to the Met’s Saturday broadcasts with his mother growing up, while Pat first heard opera when her schoolteacher’s brother, an amateur opera singer, performed for their class. “We listened to classical music at home,” Pat says. “My grandfather was a huge Caruso fan. That wasn’t truly opera, but it was a beautiful voice.” For both of them, attending Lyric performances were what grew their modest appreciation for the art form into an ardent passion.

“Our first opera was Der Rosenkavalier,” says Jerry, “and even with what was in my opinion an average cast, it was amazing. And then came Turandot with Birgit Nilsson, and I was hooked. I sat dumbfounded through the entire performance, and I knew at that moment what this art form is all about.”

In 1979, Pavarotti was to give a recital at Lyric Opera. The Franks were already planning to improve their subscription seats to the first balcony that year, but they wanted a premier location for this once-in-a-lifetime concert. Jerry went down to Lyric’s ticket office in person and even made a contribution in order to secure a spot in the second row. In true Chicago fashion, the concert was snowed out and rescheduled for later in the year at a different venue, the Medinah Temple. Fearing their prime seats would be compromised in the shuffle, Jerry was on the phone right away, securing two seats in the center of the Temple auditorium’s mezzanine, 25 feet from the stage and eye-level with the performers.

The day of the concert finally arrived, and Pat felt like she had the flu. She mustered the energy to go to the eagerly-anticipated performance, only to wait in line in the rain to get in to the theater. As the lights dimmed and Pavarotti mopped his brow and prepared to sing, Pat was trying desperately to stifle a cough. “I have to clear my throat but he’s looking right at me. I’m sitting there getting more and more nervous because he never takes his eyes off me. Of course Jerry thinks I’m crazy for thinking he was looking straight at me, but I can’t break eye contact, so I’m sitting there staring at him and trying not to cough.”

“A few weeks later,” Jerry says, “there was a big spread on him in Time magazine in which they asked him how he kept from getting nervous when he performs. Sure enough, he said he picks out someone in the audience, usually a pretty woman, and sings right to her the whole time!”

Pat beams, “I can say I have had the pleasure of having Pavarotti sing to me.”

Last year, Pat and Jerry amended their estate plan to include a leadership gift to the Breaking New Ground Campaign. Additionally, they have become deeply engaged patrons of the Ryan Opera Center. Having previously underwritten a masterclass and the final year of mezzo-soprano Julie Miller’s residency, they now sponsor second-year Ryan Opera Center tenor Mingjie Lei. “I don’t think people realize all of the extra experiences you are exposed to when you are a donor,” Pat says. “First of all, you are always around people who love opera, and who can talk opera. And you are involved in other things that the public doesn’t have access to. You may be donating to a large organization, but it’s a very personal experience. Especially with the Ryan Opera Center, it feels like a big family.” Jerry agrees. “I wish we would have gotten involved earlier. I feel like I missed 10 years of fun.

“We love this opera company, and I personally want to see this art form survive. I would love for other people, the next generation or two, to enjoy what we have enjoyed. That’s why we put money into our estate plan. Of course we’re hoping that you don’t get that for awhile,” he jokes, “but we want Lyric to be around to receive it. Chicago is a world-class city, and it has an absolutely world class opera company. There’s no question about it, and we’re so lucky to be involved.”

Facilities and Services

Welcome!

Lyric Opera of Chicago welcomes you to this performance. We are very glad you are here. In order to ensure maximum enjoyment for all guests during a performance, we ask for your compliance with some simple house rules:

- Please remain silent during the performance.
- As a gesture of respect for other audience members and the performing artists, please remain seated until an act of the opera is completely over. If you need to leave the auditorium, you may not be readmitted while the performance is in progress. The usher staff will help you understand when you can be reseated.
- Do note that the program and artists are subject to change without notice.
- Please silence all electronic devices and double check that phones, pagers, watches and other personal devices are switched off before the performance begins.
- Please don't use any device with a glowing screen at any time during a performance. It is always more disruptive and distracting than you think it is.
- Perfumes, hairsprays, colognes, and other body lotions should be avoided or used sparingly when attending the opera, as allergies are commonplace.
- Noises from the lobby may disturb patrons in the auditorium during a performance. If you are waiting to be seated, please remain quiet and avoid use of the elevators in the house, whenever possible.

Your understanding and cooperation are appreciated. Please let any member of Lyric's house staff know if you have any questions.

Other important policies:

Photography and/or audio and video recording of any is prohibited during the performance. You are encouraged to take photographs and share your experience on social media from the lobby and other parts of the public, non-performances spaces in the house.

Lyric, for safety reasons, has the right to inspect any large bags or packages and insist that all large backpacks, bags, luggage, etc. be checked at one of the Civic Opera House Checkrooms.

Outside food and beverages may not be brought into the Civic Opera House. Refreshments may be purchased inside the Opera House and limited items may come in with you to the performance. Please try to remain as quiet as possible when handling anything inside the auditorium. Lyric's acoustics carry sounds much further than you might think possible.

If you arrive late:

Lyric has a tradition of starting performances right on time, and the doors to the house are closed promptly at curtain time. We realize situations arise that can delay your arrival, and we will try to accommodate latecomers in an available section of the house or at a pre-determined break, which may be intermission. A video screen is available in the lobby, so you won't miss a moment of the performance. Please be aware that patrons who must leave their seats during a performance will not be readmitted until intermission or a suitable break.

Please always double check the time that your performance starts, as those times may vary throughout the season, depending on the total running time of the performance.

Do plan your trip to Lyric with ample time to spare. New traffic patterns around the facility may impact your previous arrival procedures and assumptions. If you are a new guest to Lyric, ample information about planning your visit is available on our web site at lyricopera.org.

Dining:

Options are available before, during (intermission), and after most Lyric Opera performances on the main and third floor of the Civic Opera House. The Pedersen Room on the main floor accepts dining reservations while the Florian Bisto on the third floor is available for walk-in dining. Refreshments are also available throughout most lobby area on each floor and on the Opera Club level. Visit lyricopera.org/dine for complete details.

Pre-opera talks:

All ticketed guests are invited to attend a free pre-performance talk in the auditorium, beginning one hour before the show and lasting for 30 minutes. This is a great opportunity to learn more about the performance you are about to experience. Doors open for the pre-opera talks 75 minutes before the performance starts. You can feel free to choose your seat for the talk. The auditorium will be cleared after the Pre-opera talk concludes.
