From the General Director

"Tannhäuser" has been a rarity onstage for the past half-century. That comes as no surprise, given that the assets required by any company producing it are formidable and increasingly difficult to achieve. It takes a powerhouse cast, a massive chorus and orchestra under a superlative conductor, and a production that can bring new freshness and humanity to a plot that can easily seem all too distant from our own social and cultural attitudes in the 21st century.

The central problem of "Tannhäuser", as I see it, is, why should we care about this seemingly desperate conflict between cerebral love and erotic love? The miracle of the piece is that it presents this story to magnificently moving effect through the glory of one of Wagner’s most melodic and memorable scores. The Pilgrims’ Chorus (certainly the most famous chorus Wagner ever composed), Elisabeth’s exhilarating entrance aria, and Wolfram’s exquisite “Song to the Evening Star” are among the special moments that have helped to sustain this opera’s exalted stature internationally.

The title role of the errant, rebellious minstrel-poet is viewed by many of the tenors who sing it as the most demanding Wagner role in their vocal category. The high phrases are as challenging to master as the low ones, the length is arduous, and the staggering intensity of emotion unrelenting throughout. Thus any opera company is compelled to wait to present "Tannhäuser" until the right protagonist is available. Sir Andrew Davis and I both agree that we were right to wait for Johan Botha to add this role to his repertoire, which he did as recently as 2010. He instantly established himself as one of the only tenors today who can conquer every hurdle of this role. He triumphed at Covent Garden in the premiere of Tim Albery’s riveting production, which I’m thrilled to bring to Lyric.

Of course, any outstanding "Tannhäuser" must be surrounded onstage by equally impressive colleagues. In that respect, this season’s production – like Lyric’s "Lohengrin" three seasons ago – boasts one of the most remarkable Wagner ensembles we have ever presented. Our Elisabeth, Amber Wagner, and our Venus, Michaela Schuster, who partnered Johan Botha in "Lohengrin", will again demonstrate their magnificent affinity for this repertoire. Making an eagerly awaited return to Lyric, Gerald Finley is a dream casting as Wolfram, and it will be thrilling for our audiences to witness John Relyea’s versatility as the Landgraf after a very different role this season, Henry VIII in "Anna Bolena".

It will be enormously exciting to hear Lyric’s orchestra and chorus take advantage of every spectacular opportunity presented to them by Wagner in this opera. On the podium is our music director, Sir Andrew Davis. With this production, Andrew will have conducted all the major Wagner operas at Lyric. Elsewhere in the "Tannhäuser" program you can read Andrew’s thoughts regarding his experiences in Wagner, which have been such a vital component in his opera conducting ever since his tenure at Lyric began 14 years ago. He brings to Wagner all the precision, the sensitivity, and the passionate commitment that have made every production he has conducted for this company such a joy.

After a quarter-century, "Tannhäuser" has returned, providing what I know will be an unforgettable experience in the opera house for all of us.

Anthony Freud
Welcome to Lyric Opera and our 60th anniversary season! I know you’ll have a memorable experience in the Ardis Krainik Theatre, and I hope it will inspire you to return throughout the season.

Excellence. Relevance. Fiscal responsibility. These are the core values of Lyric Opera, and we can anticipate that the 2014-15 season will in every way exemplify them, showing clear evidence of the company’s continuing aspiration to be the great North American opera company for the 21st century.

Excitement and momentum are palpable under the leadership trio of general director Anthony Freud, music director Sir Andrew Davis, and creative consultant Renée Fleming. The entire company demonstrates extraordinary dedication to producing artistic excellence onstage. At the same time, Lyric is expanding its reach and relevance to the vast Chicago community through events presented under the Lyric Unlimited umbrella. Our audience is continuing to grow and so is our donor base, as we continue to seek to earn your loyalty through all our activities, both on and off the stage.

Ongoing financial sustainability is, of course, critical to Lyric’s future. Our “Breaking New Ground” campaign – unanimously affirmed by the Board of Directors in early 2013 – is designed to support our new strategic initiatives that are now in place.

We already enjoy the support of a large and enthusiastic number of subscribers and single-ticket buyers. But we need to broaden and deepen the cultural service we provide to a larger number of people, and to do this, we must diversify and grow our activities. We want to increase the number of new productions in our opera season, annually produce a major musical, and significantly increase the range of activities both inside the opera house and around the city through our Lyric Unlimited initiative. We want to reach more children by increasing our presence in schools around the city.

We need to invest substantially in new technology. We are redesigning our website, intensifying our digital communications activities and updating our information technology systems. We urgently need to modernize and upgrade our stage facilities and equipment, where we have fallen behind over the last 20 years. The investment is now needed to safeguard Lyric’s position as one of the world’s foremost opera companies.

As we move forward to secure a successful, vibrant future for the company, our reliance on funded long-term contributed revenue support is greater than ever.

We want to increase the endowment by $100 million over the next three to five years, to be achieved principally through legacy gifts. Please consider including Lyric Opera in your estate planning and join our illustrious Overture Society of planned givers.

Breaking New Ground is receiving broad and generous support from the Board of Directors, but to be successful we must secure financial support from a broader range of patrons and donors. We welcome and encourage your support as we work to ensure Lyric’s long-term viability at the standards of excellence we all expect and demand.

Please know how grateful we are to each and every one of you. As audience members and donors, you are vital to Lyric’s health and success. I thank you on behalf of Lyric’s artists, staff, and volunteer boards. With your support we’ll maintain this company’s stature as not only one of the crown jewels of Chicago cultural life, but also one of the most respected and distinguished opera companies in the world.

Is Wagner the ultimate for an opera conductor, in terms of the profundity of the material?

Yes, I think so. It’s fascinating to follow his development over time. I was actually asked to conduct his second opera, Das Liebesverbot, in Barcelona, but it didn’t work for my schedule. You look at that opera and then you look at Parsifal – it’s like going from Verdi’s first opera, Oberto, to Falstaff. I can’t think of any other composers who actually matched those two journeys – going from the primitive to the sublime – to such a degree. That’s one thing the two of them have in common.

You waited several decades to take on the Wagner repertoire.

Most of my operatic experience for a huge chunk of my career was at Glyndebourne. I conducted Der Rosenkavalier at Covent Garden and the Met, and for a long time I was happy to be a Mozart/Strauss guy. I don’t know if Wagner scared me, but it took me a while to begin to love these pieces. I’d go to see a Wagner opera and, although I’d admire it, for some reason it didn’t speak to me in a way that made me think, “My God, I have to get my hands on this.” There was the sheer scale of it, the unbelievable seriousness of the subject matter… maybe I just had to grow up a bit!

Had you conducted any Wagner at the time that you began your tenure as Lyric Opera’s music director?

I’d done Act One of Die Walküre in concert, the “Ride of the Valkyries,” the prelude to Act Three of Lohengrin, the Tannhäuser overture. I also once conducted Wagner’s “Faust Overture” and decided I’d never do it again! Certainly the prospect of doing the Wagner operas was one of the most exciting things about coming to Lyric.
You’re always able to achieve such a special rapport with your singers in any opera you conduct. How do the Wagner operas strike you vocally?

Verdi needs more gymnastic ability, and the major roles generally lie higher in the voice. Wagner, for the most part, writes long lines, with not much in the way of florid passages. You don’t have to zip around at breakneck speed! It’s about beauty of sound and phrasing, plus being able to ride over his frequently huge orchestral texture. It has to be beautifully sung – that’s immensely important to me. In Wagner’s music I want to hear voices that still sound fresh. One problem with casting Wagner is that you can’t do it too far in advance. If you engage someone five or six years ahead when they’re singing this kind of repertoire, you want to be confident they can still do it when it comes around! That’s a very important element in the planning of Wagner productions.

When you were getting to know the Wagner operas, did you examine any of your predecessors’ interpretations?

I listened to Hans Knappertsbusch’s Parsifal quite a lot – supposedly the great Parsifal conductor – but to me, for the most part, it’s slow and turgid. For instance, his Flowermaidens sound as if they belong to a knitting club somewhere, partly because the tempo doesn’t have the fluidity that is essential to that music. It has to have a lilt, a willowy quality.

What about the Ring?

Go back to Solti’s famous Ring recording, which is remarkable, but the problem is that the orchestra is loud all the time! The Mendelssohnian moments are absolutely vital, so it’s not an unrelied wall of sound coming at you. In Göttterdammerung, the textures are so extraordinarily varied and complex that if everything is too thick, you don’t actually get the full impact of the writing because it doesn’t have enough clarity.

It’s interesting that after the first Ring performances at Bayreuth’s Festspielhaus, Wagner was actually thinking about revising portions of the Ring orchestration to give it greater clarity. Of course, he never did, but clarity is one of the things I always fight for in the Ring.

Doesn’t Wagner make a huge journey stylistically within the Ring, from Rheingold to Göttterdammerung?

Yes, and it’s absolutely fascinating. One of the challenges is to make it all cohere. A lot of Rheingold is fairly primitive, in terms of orchestration. The very opening [the development of a massively scaled E-flat chord over several minutes] is, of course, a stroke of genius, and it shows you what he can already do with the orchestra. In the Rhinemaidens’ music, like the opening of the second act of The Flying Dutchman, you can still feel the influence of Mendelssohn.

By the time you get to Göttterdammerung, the whole orchestral palette is infinitely subtle and varied. I think one of the most powerful and moving moments in all music is Siegfried’s funeral march. It’s impressive in the way it brings together so many of the Ring’s leitmotifs, and the orchestration itself is the work of a magician. You can see the whole development of his style. To watch this, and his use of the orchestra, through the Ring is just incredible – particularly with Siegfried, where in Act Three you’ve suddenly entered the sound world of Götterdämmerung. Siegfried is my favorite of the Ring operas, because there’s such a great diversity. Act One is like the scherzo of the Ring, fantastically planned in terms of the structure. Act Two is just a ragbag of different things, but brilliant, and Act Three moves to a different level that was only possible because Wagner had written Tristan und Isolde and Meistersinger.

At Lyric you first conducted Wagner during 2000-01, which was also your first season as music director.

The opera was The Flying Dutchman, and although it wasn’t a piece I loved when I started, I grew to admire it. I do love all the other Wagner operas! To me, in Dutchman Wagner is still forging his style, although there are moments that are phenomenal.

Amazingly enough, having begun at Lyric with the earliest of the great Wagner operas, you then jumped to his final stage work, Parsifal (2001-02).

In the meantime I’d done it in Dresden. It was a piece that I love to work on and to listen to, in a way that isn’t quite matched by any of the others. I’ve felt a need for Parsifal, for this particular sound world. It’s that wonderful sense of the opposition – the confrontation between the sensual and the spiritual. It’s something that is so much a part of the duality and the complexity of what we’re all about.

Next came the Ring – Die Walküre (2002-03), Siegfried (2003-04), Das Rheingold and Götterdämmerung (both 2004-05), and then the full cycle (also 2004-05, Lyric Opera’s 50th-anniversary season).

I can’t even tell you when I started working on it – you can’t cram for that piece – but it was before I arrived in Chicago in 2000. You go through it slowly, and it nourishes you. For instance, there’s something about the rightness of every moment in Götterdämmerung, a sort of inevitability in it. I think the same thing applies to other Wagner as well; I came out of Strauss’s Elektra like a dishrag after just an hour and 45 minutes, but somehow conducting Meistersinger [an opera lasting five hours] didn’t seem long to me! It’s because of the musical and psychological rightness of every moment. In Act Three there’s a whole series of conversations between two people, and the first scene of that act is really humongously long, but it never seemed that way to me.

Tristan und Isolde came your way in 2008-09 – such an overwhelming piece in all ways, and such a formidable challenge for all conductors. It’s the toughest of the Wagner operas. All the stuff for Tristan in Act Three, for example, is unbelievably harrowing. You have to be emotionally involved, but this is one of the conundrums of conducting – you have to have an emotional commitment to the music and convey that emotion from the orchestra and the stage to the audience. That’s a huge responsibility. You need to keep control of the sound, the structure, how the piece moves from one episode and idea to another. In a sense Tristan is the most complex of Wagner’s operas from that point of view, because the emotional world is so torrid, but also so deep.

When you came to Lohengrin (2010-11), you’d already had the experience of conducting it at Bayreuth, which I know was momentous for you.

Yes, because the Festspielhaus is a totally unique acoustical environment. The orchestra pit is almost entirely covered, which means it’s nearly impossible to drown the singers. Bayreuth isn’t a place to conduct if you have vertigo, because you’re looking down at the orchestra. I had to bully them to play softly, because at Bayreuth you can get away with playing everything mezzo forte. The beginning of Act Two, that intimate duet [Ortrud and Telramund], was difficult at Bayreuth, since it was as far upstage as I’ve ever had to conduct anything.

I know that you’re very partial to Die Meistersinger (2012-13), not just the profound moments but also the humor.

Now you’re “closing the circle” in your conducting the Wagner operas with Tannhäuser. What do you consider the great attraction the piece has for audiences?

One thing is that it’s the first of Wagner’s operas where there is this division, the conflict between the sensual world and the spiritual world that we later see in Parsifal. The religious side of the music is memorable, as embodied in the Pilgrims’ Chorus. And on the other hand, the Venusberg scene and Venus herself have music of extraordinary allure – the sexiest music Wagner ever wrote. The Venusberg scene is unadulterated sex and nothing else! In that way Tannhäuser was a groundbreaking work for Wagner that led him eventually to Tristan und Isolde.

Like the other Wagner operas, Tannhäuser is also something of a marathon for the orchestra. You also always have to concern yourself with color in this piece – especially in the Venusberg music, which has to be as scintillating and seductive as possible.

Over the years you’ve certainly developed a wonderful Wagner style with Lyric’s orchestra. This orchestra gives everything it’s got all the time, in this repertoire as in everything else they play. Of course, they know that they have to be fit and in training to handle Wagner – they take it very seriously, and they’re always very well prepared.

What do you remember of the singing in your Wagner productions?

Both of my Gurnemanzes in Parsifal, Matti Salminen and Kwangchul Youn, who were so different from each other – wonderfully sung and very memorable. I remember our Tristan, Clifton Forbis – that was a fantastic portrayal, with an intense desperation to it – really remarkable. In Lohengrin we had extraordinary performances by Johan Botha, Michaela Schuster, and Amber Wagner, who are all returning to us for Tannhäuser.

What are you anticipating in your Wagner conducting?

I’m thrilled to be doing the Ring again at Lyric [2016-20]. I’m not yet at a point in my life and career where it’s a question of been there/done that – I’d love to do Tristan and Meistersinger again, and if someone asked me to do Lohengrin again, I wouldn’t necessarily say no. I hope I can do all the things that I still have a burning desire to do.

Tannhäuser

Lyric Opera presentation generously made possible by an Anonymous Donor and the NIB Foundation with additional support from Marion A. Cameron.
Heinrich Tannhäuser, angry and frustrated that his art as a singer is not understood or appreciated, has left his home, the conservative world of the Wartburg. Since then, his singing has won him the love of the goddess Venus.

ACT ONE
Scene i. Venus and Tannhäuser celebrate their sensual life in an increasingly frenzied dance. Tannhäuser, however, has had enough of the pleasures of the Venusberg and longs to return to his home. Venus urges him to forget his old life and to sing for her. Tannhäuser begins to sing in praise of Venus's beauty (Dir, töne Lob), but the song soon turns into a plea for him to be allowed to return to his earthly life. Venus attempts to seduce Tannhäuser into remaining with her, but Tannhäuser is adamant that he must leave. Venus angrily prophesizes that he will find no peace in the world of men and will return to her in desperation.

Scene ii. Tannhäuser finds himself back near his former home. A young boy sings a song to the spring (Frau Holda kam aus dem Berg hervor) and a group of pilgrims passes by, reminding Tannhäuser of his guilt at having been with Venus. He can see only a life of pain and suffering ahead of him.

Tannhäuser is discovered by the Landgraf, ruler of the Wartburg, along with Wolfram, Walther, Heinrich, Reinmar, and Biterolf, all of them friends and fellow singers of Tannhäuser. They urge him to return to the Wartburg. Tannhäuser is reluctant until Wolfram mentions the name of Elisabeth, the Landgraf's niece, and tells Tannhäuser how Elisabeth has grieved for him, and virtually become a recluse since he disappeared. Hoping that Elisabeth’s love may redeem him, Tannhäuser agrees to return to the Wartburg.

ACT TWO
Elisabeth waits excitedly for Tannhäuser’s return (Dich, teure Halle). Tannhäuser is led in by Wolfram, and begs Elisabeth’s forgiveness for his absence. She tells him how his music moved her in the past, and of her grief when he left the Wartburg. The pair rejoice that they are together again. Wolfram, also in love with Elisabeth, realizes that he has no hope of winning her.

The Landgraf tries to discover Elisabeth’s true feelings for Tannhäuser but she begs him not to question her. He tells her that the singing contest he has announced will reveal the truth.

Once his people are assembled, the Landgraf announces the subject of the song contest: What is the essence of love? The singer who best answers the question will be awarded whatever prize he wishes by Elisabeth. Wolfram sings of love as a fountain of pure water that he would never disturb but only worship from afar. Tannhäuser contradicts Wolfram, saying that true love is burning desire, rather than spiritual devotion.

Walther tells Tannhäuser that it is he who does not know love, stating that love is virtuous only if it is chaste. Tannhäuser responds with scorn, passionately proclaiming the importance of physical desire. This enrages Biterolf, who attacks Tannhäuser for insulting the virtue of woman. The discussion grows increasingly heated until Tannhäuser breaks into a hymn of praise to Venus, revealing that he has been in the Venusberg. The crowd is horrified. The Landgraf and his men are about to attack Tannhäuser when Elisabeth steps forward to defend him. She begs that Tannhäuser be given the chance to repent for her, since he has broken her heart. Tannhäuser is devastated at the pain he has caused Elisabeth and begs for mercy. The Landgraf announces that Tannhäuser must join the annual pilgrimage to Rome and seek the forgiveness of the pope. As Tannhäuser sets off, Elisabeth prays for his salvation.

ACT THREE
Elisabeth, watched by Wolfram, is waiting for the pilgrims to return from Rome, but when they arrive Tannhäuser is not among them. In despair, Elisabeth prays to the Virgin to let her die and through her death save Tannhäuser (Allnächt'ge Jungfrau). Alone, Wolfram calls on the evening star to guide Elisabeth out of the valley of death on her way to heaven (O du, mein holdrer Abendstern).

Tannhäuser enters, exhausted and bitter. He tells Wolfram that the pope was horrified at his sins and refused him pardon, telling him that he would be forgiven only if the pope’s staff sprouted green leaves. In despair, Tannhäuser has decided to return to the Venusberg, and calls upon Venus to take him. Wolfram urges him not to give up hope of salvation. Venus appears, calling seductively to Tannhäuser to return to her. Wolfram, desperate to stop Tannhäuser, calls out Elisabeth’s name. At that moment the men of the Wartburg bring news of Elisabeth’s death, and Venus vanishes. Wolfram explains to Tannhäuser that Elisabeth has sacrificed herself in the hope of saving his soul. Having finally understood the depth of Elisabeth’s love, Tannhäuser’s final words are “Elisabeth, pray for me.” And now a miracle is revealed: the pope’s staff has sprouted green leaves: Tannhäuser’s soul is saved.

FEBRUARY 9 - MARCH 6, 2015
Tannhäuser has been a triumph for the world-renowned South African tenor in new productions at the Vienna Staatsoper (role debut) and Covent Garden: “If you sing Tannhäuser as it’s written, with all the pianissimi, there’s so much beautiful music. When Wagner composed it, there wasn’t such a thing as a ‘Wagnerian tenor.’ But if you read his letters to Liszt, who conducted most of his operas, you’ll find Wagner writing, ‘I want bel canto line to be heard in my music, although it’s in the German language.’ At Bayreuth, Wagner singers started getting away from bel canto, which was a shame. I challenge myself not only to make Tannhäuser’s text understandable but also to sing with bel canto style.” Among Botha’s other standard-setting portrayals in German repertoire are Walther von Stolzing (Tanglewood, Cologne, Vienna, and this season at the Metropolitan Opera), Parsifal (Vienna), Siegmund (Bayreuth), Lohengrin (Coveat Garden, Met, Vienna, Basel, Cologne), the Emperor/Die Frau ohne Schatten (La Scala, Covent Garden, Munich), and Apollo/Daphne (international tour with West German Radio Symphony). Botha, one of today’s most eminent interpreters of Otello (Lyric, Met, Vienna, Hamburg, Berlin, Munich, San Francisco), has also scored great successes as Radames (Vienna, Met, Hamburg), Andrea Chénier (Vienna, Hamburg), and Calaf (Lyric, Covent Garden, Salzburg). The tenor’s close association with the Vienna Staatsoper includes more than 20 starring roles and the title of Kammersänger. He has also appeared at the major houses of Paris, Madrid, Sydney, and Los Angeles; and with the leading orchestras of London, Berlin, Vienna, Boston, and Cleveland. He appears on CD in Lohengrin, Tristan und Isolde, Tiefland, Elektra, Daphne, the Dvorák Stabat Mater, and two aria recitals; and on DVD in Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg (Vienna), Die Walküre (Bayreuth), Aida (Met), and Turandot (Salzburg).

Also this season: Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg, Metropolitan Opera; Otello, Cologne Opera; Parsifal, Vienna Staatsoper.

JOHAN BOTHA
(Tannhäuser)

AMBER WAGNER
(Elisabeth)
Previously at Lyric Opera: Seven roles since 2007-08, most recently Leonora/ Il trovatore (2014-15); Prima Donna and title role/Ariadne auf Naxos (2011-12); Elsa/Lohengrin (2010-11).

Also this season: Verdi Requiem, Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Orchestre Philharmonique de Nice.

MICHAELA SCHUSTER
(Venus)
Previously at Lyric Opera: Ortrud/Lohengrin (2010-11).
Also this season: Aida, Hamburg Staatsoper; Lohengrin, Netherlands Opera; Mahler’s Symphony No. 5, City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra.

“The two roles are not so far apart,” the German mezzo-soprano told classicalsource.com, speaking of Venus and Elisabeth. “Both are very strong, but I think the princess [Elisabeth] is the more calculating, has more of an agenda. Venus is calculating when she is sure that Tannhäuser is hers and that he loves her, but although she is a goddess with a lot of pride, she is really in love. When it becomes clear that Tannhäuser intends to go away, she becomes more and more insecure in a human way. In Wagner it’s really important that such characters become human and not just goddesses, because that makes them all the more interesting.” Schuster in recent seasons has triumphed as Ottrud (Berlin, Oslo, new Munich Festival production), Waltraute (Amsterdam), Fricka (Stuttgart, Vienna), Brangäne (Berlin, Barcelona), Sieglinde (Berlin, Dresden, Madrid, Vienna), and Kundry (Berlin, Tokyo). She began her career at Darmstadt’s Staatsstheater in such roles as Santuzza, Charlotte, Carmen, and Offenbach’s Giulietta. Since then, dramatic mezzo repertoire of Verdi, Ponchielli, and Cilea have brought her to Frankfurt (Don Carlo), Covent Garden (Adriana Lecouvreur), Berlin (La Gioconda), Baden-Baden (Aida), Barcelona, and Brussels. She scored a great success as Marielle Wozzeck in a new production at the Munich Festival, and as Caesonia/ Detlev Glanert’s Caligula in its Frankfort world premiere and Cologne revival. Her acclaimed Herodias/Salome (Covent Garden) and Nurse/ Die Frau ohne Schatten (Salzburg Festival), both in the premieres of new productions, can be seen on DVD. Schuster has collaborated with many major directors, among them Sir David McVicar, Richard Jones, Peter Konwitschny, and Robert Wilson. She also works regularly with today’s most celebrated conductors, such as Barenboim, Bychkov, Dohnányi, and Welser-Möst.

“From the first notes of Tannhäuser’s grand overture,” says the American soprano, “we are swept into a heart-wrenching story of redemption and devotion. Elisabeth is a symbol in this opera – a symbol of redemption. She represents the ideas and the life that Tannhäuser longs for. Her music is achingly simple, yet substantial and full of its own longing, as she is devoted and loves Tannhäuser. When I sing the aria ‘Dich, teure Halle,’ I feel Elisabeth’s hope. The song contest had gone away but now it’s back, and with it comes Tannhäuser’s return. For Elisabeth, that represents the beginning of a new era.” Wagner is a Ryan Opera Center alumna whose rise to prominence has been confirmed by her Elsa and Ariadne at Lyric Opera, and by similarly prestigious appearances such as Leonora/La forza del destino (Washington), Ariadne (Toronto and Valencia, both conducted by Sir Andrew Davis), Amelia/ Un ballo in maschera (Metropolitan Opera), Sieglinde/Die Walküre (Frankfurt, DVD), Sentl/Der fliegende Holländer and Elsa (both at the Savolinina Festival), and Brangäne/ Tristan und Isolde (European debut, Prague). Her Sieglinde has also been heard in concert (Colorado Symphony – Act One, Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood – Act Three). Among her concert engagements have been Mahler’s Symphony No. 8 (Aspen Festival, Robert Spano conducting), Strauss’s Four Last Songs (Oregon Symphony, Carlos Kalmar conducting), and Wagner’s Wesendonck Lieder and Verdi’s Requiem (Tucson Symphony, Orchestre Métropolitain du Grand Montréal). A former Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions national winner, the soprano is featured in MONCA’s feature film The Audition. A recipient of Richard Tucker Foundation and Sullivan Foundation career grants, Wagner is a former winner of the Liederkranz Foundation Competition and the Kirsten Flagstad Award of the George London Foundation.
Gerald Finley
(Wolfram)

Previously at Lyric Opera:

Also this season: The Rake’s Progress, Metropolitan Opera; Falstaff, Canadian Opera Company; Guillaume Tell, Covent Garden.

The Grammy Award-winning Canadian bass-baritone sang his first Wagner role, Hans Sachs/Die Meistersinger, to unanimous acclaim in 2011 at Glyndebourne (CD, DVD). He explained in The Guardian that “people did keep saying that not only would I enjoy [Wagner repertoire], it would help me open up as an artist. And so ultimately I thought if this is going to help me sing better, why am I resisting?” Finley has triumphed in all the major bass-baritone roles of Mozart (venues including the Metropolitan Opera, Glyndebourne, Covent Garden, Vienna, Munich, Salzburg); as Onegin, Yeletsky, and Golaud (all of which he has sung at Covent Garden); and in the role of Robert Oppenheimer/John Adams’s Doctor Atomic, which he created (San Francisco, Amsterdram, Lyric, Met, CD, DVD): “I like it that we have stories from today that can be reflected or discussed or approached via contemporary music, voice and theater. But you do attempt to look at any material as if it was the first night. You try to think of Wagner’s notes as still being wet on the page, and you try to connect musically with people in a way that perhaps they haven’t experienced before.” Finley’s other world premieres include Mark Anthony Turnage’s Anna Nicole (Covent Garden, DVD) and The Silver Tassie (English National Opera, earning Finley the Royal Philharmonic Society Award for Singers), and Tobias Picker’s Fantastic Mr. Fox (Los Angeles Opera). Finley recently sang his first Iago/Otello with the London Symphony Orchestra (CD). Prominent in his large discography are many solo discs, including Britten’s Songs and Proverbs (Gramophone Award in the Vocal Solo category, 2011), Schubert’s Winterreise, and songs by Schumann, Shostakovich, Ives, and Barber. Finley was appointed an Officer of the Order of Canada in July 2014.

Jesse Donner
(Walther)

“I’m very excited about my role in Tannhäuser,” says the American tenor, a first-year member of the Ryan Opera Center. “It will be wonderful in this production to be in the shadow of important Wagner singers. Johan Botha’s voice is thrilling! In the same way that Capriccio was a great experience for me, this opera is, too, with a lot of ensemble singing. I have just enough moments of solo singing to make an impression. When I realized that I’d have an aria onstage in my first year at Lyric, I was celebrating for weeks.” Donner views his acceptance into the Ryan Opera Center as “a reward of some sort for having optimism when it’s easy to be pessimistic about this career path. To get the kind of training I’m getting here is beyond what I could have imagined.” The tenor recently completed graduate and post-graduate studies at the University of Michigan (Bacchus/Ariadne auf Naxos, title role/Der Kaiser von Atlantis, Lucan/Il reincoronazione di Poppea). He previously received a bachelor of music degree from Iowa State University. The Des Moines native received the 2014 George Shirley Award for Opera Performance, a special encouragement award from the 2014 Metropolitan Opera National Council Regional Auditions, and first place in the 2012 Michigan Friends of Opera Competition. Other credits include Pinkerton/Madama Butterfly with Opera in the Ozarks and concerts with the Toledo Symphony, Adrian Symphony, and University of Michigan Symphony Orchestra. Jesse Donner is sponsored by Anne Gross and Robert C. Marks.

Dan Dector
(Biterolf)

Also this season: Madama Butterfly, Hawaii Opera Theatre, Opera Las Vegas.

“My feeling is that Biterolf is in love with Elisabeth,” says the American baritone. “That’s one reason for his disliking Tannhäuser. He’s bitter and he feels, too, that Tannhäuser is too big on himself. There are some parts in Biterolf’s music that do require lyricism, when I’m singing in my aria about love and women’s honor. But when Tannhäuser says ‘You should all go to Venus!’ Biterolf leads the group in saying to Elisabeth, ‘How can you let your heart be deluded by such a blasphemer? Get away from him – he should be sent back to the pit of hell!’” Sutin scored a great success at the Metropolitan Opera last season, replacing Thomas Hampson at the last moment in the title role/Wozzeck (conducted by James Levine). His varied Met roles have included the Journalist/Lulu (debut, 2002), Ping/Turandot, Shchelkalov/Boris Godunov, the One-Eyed Brother/Die Frau ohne Schatten, and Paris/Robe de Juliette (premiere, new production). Among other important appearances throughout North America have been the title role/Il barbiere di Siviglia (Opera Las Vegas), Tonio/Pagliacci (Austin Lyric...
COREY BIX (Heinrich)
Lyric Opera debut
Also this season: Floyd’s Of Mice and Men, Tulsa Opera.

The American tenor has scored major successes in a wide variety of German repertoire. Last season, for example, he was heard as Edgar Aubry/Marschner’s Der Vampyr (New Orleans Opera), Bacchus/Ariadne auf Naxos (marking his return to the Glimmerglass Festival), Erik/ Der fliegende Holländer (Arizona Opera), the Fourth Jew/Salome (Philadelphia Orchestra under the baton of Yannick Nézet-Séguin) and – in a rare excursion into comic repertoire – Alfred/Die Fledermaus (Anchorage Opera). Among his recent concert appearances has been Szymanowski’s Symphony No. 3 (American Symphony Orchestra). Bix began his European career as the Prince/Rusalka at the Greek National Opera, returning there as Stravinsky’s Oedipus Rex. Since then he has been heard as Erik (Budapest), the Emperor/Die Frau ohne Schatten (Graz), Stolzing (Kiel), the title role/Flotow’s Alessandro Stradella (Giessen), and a much-acclaimed Bacchus (Vienna, Karlsruhe). Among the other major venues that have welcomed the tenor are Los Angeles Opera, Des Moines Metro Opera, The Santa Fe Opera, the Bard Music Festival, and Carnegie Hall. Bix has built his career with exceptional care: “People early on told me I’d have the dramatic voice I have now,” the tenor told taminophile.com, “but who knew what to do with that? It was fortunate that I won the George London Competition, and that I met Evelyn Lear and Thomas Stewart. They told me, ‘You’re going to have to wait.’” Today Bix believes strongly that artists of his generation should serve as mentors: “Even if we aren’t singers with 50-year careers, the knowledge we have from living in this career is very beneficial to young singers. It’s nice to be able to share that.”

RICHARD WIEGOLD
Lyric Opera debut
Also this season: Tristan und Isolde, North Carolina Opera; Die Zauberflöte, Opéra Théâtre de St. Etienne (France); Guillame Tell, Welsh National Opera.

The Welsh bass, who has sung Reinmar previously at Toulouse’s Théâtre du Capitole, considers Tannhäuser “some of Wagner’s most thrilling music. The end of Act Two also has an interesting dynamic, with some people saying what they think they should say and others saying what they actually believe.” Wiegold’s Wagner roles include Marke/Tristan und Isolde (Prague State Opera), Colonnal Rienzi (Toulouse), Schwarz/Die Meistersinger (Covent Garden), Daland/The Flying Dutchman (Dorset Opera Festival), and his first Gunnerman/ Parsifal (Estonian National Opera), “my favorite role by miles. He has a sense of wonder in everything, an understanding of what’s going on, that is very pleasing to be part of.” Last season Wiegold made role debuts as Bancol/Macheth (Palm Beach Opera) and Timuri/Turandot (Utah Opera). He also joined Welsh National Opera for Muses und Aron and Jonathan Harvey’s Wagner Dream and returned to Glyndebourne for Billy Budd, both in the summer and on tour to the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Wiegold debuted at Covent Garden as Dr. Grenvi/La traviata: “Singing with Renée Fleming, Thomas Hampson, and Joseph Calleja, I couldn’t have started in a better way! I feel a sense of history at Covent Garden as many so many extraordinary singers having given some of their most extraordinary performances there.” The bass has also been heard with the Royal Philharmonic, Hallé Orchestra, Scottish Opera, and the Buxton Festival. Other important achievements outside Britain include Salome (Salzburg Easter Festival, Verbier Festival, Berlin Philharmonic), Don Giovanni (Canadian Opera Company, where he has also sung Pelléas et Mélisande), Martinu’s Julietta (Geneva’s Grand Théâtre), Weinberger’s Schwanda the Bagpipe (Wexford Festival, CD), and Walton’s Façade (Mexico City’s Orquesta Filarmónica de la UNAM).

ANGELA MANNINO
(Shepherd)
Previously at Lyric Opera: Seven roles since 2008-09, most recently First Esquire, Flowermaiden/Parsifal (2013-14); Barbarrina/Le nozze di Figaro (2009-10).

Also this season: Le nozze di Figaro, The Dallas Opera; Floyd’s Markheim, Little Opera of New York; Mahler’s Symphony No. 4, Louisiana Philharmonic.

“I’m not going to try to sound like a little boy in this role,” says the Louisiana-born soprano, a Ryan Opera Center alumna. “When I sang the Shepherd in Tosca, that needed a child-like sound, but this time it’s more like last season, when I sang an Esquire in Parsifal: Sir Andrew Davis asked me just to sing it, without manipulating anything.” Earlier this season Mannino returned to The Dallas Opera as Barbarina/Le nozze di Figaro (“It was fun to repeat the role in the same production I’d done at Lyric”) and portrayed Tessi/Carlisle Floyd’s Markheim in New York: “With the Rockettes representing New York at Christmas for so many people, it was interesting to have a somewhat dark Christmas piece going on.” She was thrilled that Floyd himself was present for the Markheim performances (“The opportunity to perform for a living composer who’s so well known doesn’t come along very often”). Mannino earned her graduate degree at Indiana University (Despina, Blondchen, Musetta, Miss Tittimouse/Too Many Sopranos). She has a close association with New Orleans Opera (Le nozze di Figaro, Suor Angelica, Gianni Schicchi, Cendrillon, Un ballo in maschera). The soprano is a former apprentice artist at The Santa Fe Opera and Central City Opera. She debuted at the Metropolitan Opera in Lulu, and has scored successes in leading roles at Opera Omaha (La Cenerentola), Opera Grand Rapids (Rigoletto), Madison Opera (Don Giovanni), Maine’s Bar Harbor Music Festival (Roméo et Juliette, Le nozze di Figaro), Kentucky Opera (Cendrillon), Wolf Trap Opera (If turco in Italia, Wolf-Ferrari’s Le donne curiose), and the Wolf Trap Foundation (John Musto’s The Inspector, world premiere, CD).

SIR ANDREW DAVIS
Conductor
Previously at Lyric Opera: 48 operas since 1987, most recently Capriccio, Don Giovanni (2014-15); La clemenza di Tito (2013-14). Also this season: The Passenger, Lyric Opera; The Merry Widow and Hansel and Gretel, Metropolitan Opera; concerts with the Royal Scottish National Orchestra and the major orchestras of the BBC, Melbourne, Liverpool, and Toronto. Lyric Opera’s music director is particularly struck by the fact that Tannhäuser is “the first of Wagner’s operas where there is a division – a conflict – between the sensual world and the spiritual world.” Sir Andrew relishes the pilgrims’ music, “extraordinarily effective writing for male chorus, including the ‘big tune,’ which is sung in unison. It has a great simplicity and directness – you have to go to Parsifal to see the same kind of writing. The religious side of this score is actually very memorable, while the scene in the Venusberg and the music for Venus herself have a quite extraordinary allure.” Chief conductor of the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra, Sir Andrew is former music director of Glyndebourne Festival Opera and currently conductor laureate of both the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and the BBC Symphony Orchestra. His operatic successes include recent return engagements at Covent Garden (Capriccio), Glyndebourne (Billy Budd), and the BBC Proms (The Midsummer Marriage). He has conducted for many other major houses, among them the Metropolitan Opera, La Scala, the Bayreuth Festival, and the major companies of Munich, Paris, San Francisco, and Santa Fe. In 2014 he returned to one of his specialties, the music of Elgar, for The Saga of King Olaf (Bergen Philharmonic) and The Kingdom and The Apostles (BBC Symphony Orchestra). Last season he also undertook concerts with the major orchestras of New York, Toronto, Montreal, and Boston. Sir Andrew has appeared with virtually every internationally prominent orchestra, including those of Chicago, Berlin, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and London. A vast discography documents the British conductor’s artistry, with recent CDs including works of York Bowen (1st and 2nd Symphonies, Grammy nomination for Best Orchestral Performance, 2011), Elgar, Delius, and Holst. See “The Ultimate Challenge,” page 16.

TIM ALBERY
Director
Previously at Lyric Opera: Also this season: Katya Kabanova, Boston Lyric Opera; Don Carlo, Opera Philadelphia; La finta giardiniera, The Santa Fe Opera. Tim Albery is closely associated with all the major British opera companies, including English National Opera (Billy Budd, Peter Grimes, Lobengrin, From the House of the Dead, Boris Godunov, War and Peace), Covent Garden (Chérubin, The Flying Dutchman, Tannhäuser), Opera North, Scottish Opera, and Welsh National Opera. In 2003 he staged the Ring cycle for Scottish Opera at the Edinburgh Festival and in 2013 Peter Grimes on the Beach, winner of the International Opera Award for Best Production, in the open air for the Aldeburgh Festival. Productions on the continent include Peter Grimes, Simon Boccanegra, Ariadne auf Naxos (Munich’s Bayerische Staatsoper); Benvenuto Cellini, Beatrice and Benedict, La Wally (Netherlands Opera); and La Wally (Bregenz Festival). His operatic work has also been seen throughout North America, including productions at the Metropolitan Opera (A Midsummer Night’s Dream, The Merry Widow) and in Santa Fe, St. Paul, Dallas, and Toronto. Albery is drawn to works outside of the standard repertoire: “As a theater director, if you offered me Cymbeline or Hamlet, I’d choose Cymbeline. My instincts are that it’s always more challenging to take the pieces that either aren’t known or are thought of as insoluble. With opera, my productions of Massenet’s Chérubin and Keiser’s King Cophetua, both rarely performed, have been highlights for me. These are great pieces that people don’t know and they excite me more than the 400th Tosca.” Among Albery’s theater credits are As You Like It at London’s Old Vic Theatre; Wallenstein and Macbeth, both at the Royal Shakespeare Company; Berenice at the National Theatre; Attempts on Her Life at the Royal Court Theatre; and Mary Stuart at London’s Greenwich Theatre.

JON MORRELL
Costume Designer
Lyric Opera debut
Also this season: Partenope, San Francisco Opera; Otello, English National Opera; La finta giardiniere, The Santa Fe Opera.

The British designer trained at London’s Central School of Art and Design. Awarded the Olivier Award for Best Costume Design in 2013 for the musical Top Hat, Morrell has created opera productions with many major directors. With Tim Albery: Tannhäuser, Covent Garden; Aida, Canadian Opera Company; La Bohème, English National Opera. With David Alden: Otello, ENO, Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg, De Nederlandse Opera; Rossini’s Maometto Secondo, The Santa Fe Opera; Rossini’s La gazza ladra, Oper Frankfurt; Mayr’s Medea in Corinto, Theater St. Gallen; Jenůfa, Houston Grand Opera/Washington National Opera/ENO; Cavalli’s Giasone, Spoleto USA; and Katya Kabanova, Dallas, Houston. With Christopher Alden: Handel’s Partenope, Opera Australia/ENO/San Francisco Opera; Tosca, Opera North-UK/Opera Australia; Wozzeck, Dallas. With Graham Vick: La clemenza di Tito, Turin. With Jonathan Miller Schreker’s Die Gezeichneten, Zürich. Other major achievements include Angels in America (Paris’s Châtelet), Iphigénie en Tauride (Hamburg Staatsoper), and Rigoletto (Scottish Opera, New Zealand Opera). In addition to Top Hat, Morrell’s extensive theatre credits include His Dark Materials and The Winter’s Tale, directed by Nicholas Hytner for London’s National Theatre. He has also designed for choreographers Ashley Page (London’s Royal Ballet, Scottish Ballet, San Francisco Ballet) and Christopher Wheeldon (New York City Ballet, San Francisco Ballet, Houston Ballet). “My work with Tim Albery for Tannhäuser,” says Morrell, “was to create costumes that described a contemporary though not specific time, they could be recent past, present or near future. They locate the people in no specific place, though associations can be made with familiar conflict zones. We have combined ideas that might suggest a repressive and conservative community, a hostile world devoid of aesthetic beauty. Conversely the choices we made for the Venusberg were intended to celebrate sensuality and beauty.”

DAVID FINN
Lighting Designer
Previously at Lyric Opera: Rusalka (2013-14).
Also this season: Roméo et Juliette, Deutsche Oper Berlin; Die Walküre, Canadian Opera Company; Le nozze di Figaro, Opera Australia.

“Michael Levine and Tim Albery have created an extremely poetic interpretation of Wagner’s work that is dramatically conclusive and aesthetically arresting,” says the American designer. “In the black void that unifies the evening, my goal was to make sense visually out of the duality of the space – that of the expressionist looks of a modern theater, sensual and complete with theatrical allegory. Seen in Act One, that duality represents the allure of the mythological Venusberg, which then ultimately crumbles and decays under the power of nature and at the hands of humanity, to represent the Wartburg – the earthly setting in Acts Two and Three.” In addition to Tim Albery, Finn enjoys ongoing collaborations with such major directors as Sir David McVicar, Sergio Morabito and Josi Wieler, Willy Decker, and François Girard. He has since undertaken six Salzburg Festival productions, five at Covent Garden, the Ring (Toronto, Stuttgart), the Mozart/da Ponte trilogy (Amsterdam), and productions for the Brussels, Florence, Graz, and San Francisco opera companies. Achievements in theater include productions at the American Conservatory Theater, National Theater of Czechoslovakia, Sundance Theater Institute, and The Children’s Theater of Minneapolis. Film work includes directing a documentary, The Green Monster, for PBS’s POV series. Finn has worked extensively in dance (White Oak Dance Project, Twyla Tharp & Dancers, Birmingham Royal Ballet, the major ballet companies of Munich, Sydney, Paris, Lyon, Houston, San Francisco, and Toronto). Architectural lighting design work includes dozens of restaurants, retail and theater spaces, and the case study glass house, Kramlich Residence, with architects Herzog & de Meuron in Napa Valley. Finn has worked twice for Cirque du Soleil, including lighting for Michael Jackson ONE in Las Vegas.
MICHAEL BLACK
(Chorus Master)
Previously at Lyric Opera:
Chorus master since 2013-14; interim chorus master, 2011-12.

Lyric’s chorus master considers the men’s opening sequence (sung with the Shepherd) “very difficult to keep in tune, because the chorus is unaccompanied. The entrance of the guests in Act Two is about grand-scale sound. The end of Act Two goes on for some 60 pages, with a lot of text and little interjections. The Pilgrims’ Chorus starts offstage in four parts, and then becomes unison when they appear onstage. It’s my favorite choral music of Wagner, and a melody everyone can hum – probably one of the three or four most famous choruses ever written.” Chorus master from to 2003 to 2013 at Opera Australia (where he worked on Tannhäuser for performances under Philippe Auguin, Simone Young, and the late Richard Hickox), Black prepared the OA chorus for more than 90 operas and many concert works. He returned there last season for musical preparation of Otello. At OA he progressed from rehearsal pianist to assistant chorus master and children’s chorus master, before his appointment as chorus master. He has served in that capacity for such distinguished organizations as the Edinburgh Festival, Holland Park Opera (London), and, in Australia, the Sydney Symphony Orchestra (including Rachmaninoff’s The Bells, led by Vladimir Ashkenazy), and Philharmonia Choir, Motet Choir, and Cantillation chamber choir. One of Australia’s most prominent vocal accompanists, Black regularly performed for recitals, broadcasts, and recordings (he was heard numerous times in Australian Broadcast Corporation programs). He has been a lecturer at the Sydney Conservatorium of Music, of which he is an alumnus. Black also holds a master’s degree in musicology from the University of New South Wales.

JASMIN VARDIMON
(Choreographer)
Lyric Opera debut
Also this season: PARK, Jasmin Vardimon Company, U.K. tour; Maze (installation/dance/art), collaboration between Vardimon and designer Ron Arad, Winter Gardens, Margate, U.K.

The choreographer, winner of the 2013 International Theatre Institute Award for Excellence in Dance, explains that “When Tim Albery approached me to create the Venusberg, I was in the middle of creating for my own company a large scale piece called 7734. It dealt with the capacity of human nature to produce brutality, and the responsibility of an artist in that world. Wagner came to mind, but I found his Venusberg full of love, a celebration of life and lust. Tannhäuser, though, contains in him the struggle of an artist between two worlds, between popularity and integrity to his roots and his art – between his responsibilities and his desires. The Venusberg, therefore, is created to portray that one world he is struggling to leave.” Born and raised on a kibbutz in Israel, Vardimon was a member of the Kibbutz Dance Company for five years. She resented permanently in the U.K. after receiving the British Council’s “On the Way to London” Choreography Award (1995). At the same time she founded the Jasmin Vardimon Company (previously Zhang), which has earned great acclaim in Britain and internationally. An associate artist at Sadler’s Wells, Vardimon was appointed to the same position at The Place (1998) and was a partner at Yorkshire Dance (1999-2005). Ladubé gained Vardimon selection for the BBC documentary Dance Film Academy, charting the development of a film version of the piece (2005). She has choreographed for the Royal Opera House (Tannhäuser) and for ROH2’s OperaShots season. Other commissions include Bifé Theatre Belgrade, Hellenic Dance Athens, CandoCo, WID, Bare Bones, Transitions and curating the Dance Ballads Festival at the Oval House. In 2013, Vardimon was guest artistic director for the first year of the National Youth Dance Company.

MAFALDA DEVILLE
(Asst. Choreographer)
Lyric Opera debut
The Portugal native studied in Porto at Ginasião Dance School, followed by London Contemporary Dance School of the Place. She worked with BCN Dance Company, Portugal (2000), later becoming the company’s resident choreographer. Deville is closely associated with the Jasmin Vardimon Company as dancer, rehearsal director and director of the educational project since 2003. Among her works are Kousoul (2006), I prefer to stand... symbolically (2007); Mata-me em series (2011); In Between, Bliss (2014); two projects for Sadler’s Wells in London, Sum of Parts (2011) and Compas (2012); and Transforming Steps in Kolkata, India (performed at Sadler’s Wells, 2011). She was choreographer for RIOT Offspring at Sadler’s Wells Theatre (2013) and Silence for JV2 (2013). Deville collaborated with theater director Tiago Rodrigues as a choreographer for his production Interpretação (2014) with the Mundo Perfeito company. She choreographed Mein Name ist Menich (2012) and Freund (2013) for Perform(d)ance in Stralsund, Germany. As a commissioned artist for the CAT project at Trinity Laban Conservatoire of Music and Dance, she created Murmur (2013) and remounted that work for Shoreditch YDC.

The American dancer-choreographer’s operatic credits include remounting the choreography of Lyric’s Iphigénie en Tauride at San Francisco Opera and Covent Garden. She has presented a 20-year retrospective of her work at Chicago’s Vittum Theater and Ruth Page Dance Center, as well as in her hometown, Kalamazoo, Michigan. Tye is a past recipient of Regional Dance America’s Best Young Choreographer Award and the Monticello Choreographer’s Award; the latter garnered her invitations to choreograph throughout America. In addition to Lyric Opera, she has performed in Chicago with Joel Hall Dancers, Salt Creek Ballet, and Second City Ballet. Tye is artistic director and principal ballet instructor at the Hyde Park School of Dance, which she founded in 1993. Four years later she founded Tyge Dance Project, which has performed at Steppenwolf, the Athenaeum, and throughout America in a revival of Spike Jones’s Nutcracker.

SARAH HATTEN
(Wigmaster and Makeup Designer)
Previously at Lyric Opera: Wigmaster and makeup designer since 2011-12.

Lyric’s wigmaster and makeup designer has worked in a wide repertoire at Des Moines Metro Opera and Michigan Opera Theatre (both since 2006), as well as Columbus Opera, Toledo Opera, the Cabrillo Music Festival, and the University of Cincinnati College-Conservatory of Music. She has also worked at the Glimmerglass Festival and the major opera companies of Los Angeles, Omaha, Cleveland, Sarasota, and Central City, as well as Wisconsin’s American Players Theatre and, in Los Angeles, the Pantages Theatre and the Geffen Playhouse. Hatten earned a B. A. in music at Simpson College.
THE TWO FACES OF VENUS IN WAGNER’S TANNHÄUSER

By Katherine Syer

F. Tischbein’s drawing of history’s first great Wagner interpreters in the roles they created – Wilhelmine Schröder-Devrient as Venus and Joseph Tichatschek as Tannhäuser.

When he became chief conductor of the Royal Opera in Dresden in 1843, Wagner landed a dream job. The theater he had at his disposal was state-of-the-art and spurred his experimental spirit. His employer, the Saxon king, was fairly liberal. Although a downturn in the political situation would mar things a few years later – leading to a revolutionary uprising – Wagner initially enjoyed the chance of being able to produce any opera that he composed. Tannhäuser, the first opera he completed there, remains radical in the way it juxtaposes and interlaces two dramatically contrasting worlds, while playing with our perception of reality along the way. In its probing examination of the tension between the intellect and the sensual, as the singers Wolfram and Tannhäuser both pursue Elisabeth, the opera urgently defends passionate feeling as superior to a detached experience of the world.

Wolfram sings some of the most poignant melodies in the opera, but the cards are stacked against him as he tries to win Elisabeth’s affections. This is not your average operatic love triangle, or quadrangle, if we take Venus into account. Elisabeth and Tannhäuser share a special but complex connection – one that overcomes his mysterious absence from the Wartburg and involvement with the goddess Venus. We begin to sense the broader significance of Elisabeth’s role when Wolfram notes that she withdrew from the song contest after Tannhäuser disappeared. Tannhäuser’s decision to leave the Wartburg thus affected not only her but the community at large. Only with this news is Wolfram able to convince Tannhäuser to return. He thereby enables the revival of the song contest that forms the opera’s central act, when he will compete with his friend for Elisabeth’s hand.

The Wartburg is a bleak place without song, and we can understand Wolfram’s desire to resume the contest as in part altruistic. Still, he does his best to win. He promises not to ripple the waters of the well that is the subject of his paean to a chaste kind of love. A passionate side of him sears through that controlled surface, but only later when he implores heaven to deem his song the winner. All to no avail, however, for Elisabeth unwaveringly supports Tannhäuser, even after he openly praises the goddess Venus and admits to dallying in her licentious grotto. On the brink of being run through by the swords of the astonished and hostile Wartburg men, Tannhäuser is offered the chance to join a group of pilgrims seeking absolution.

It’s an amazing scene when the pilgrims first grace the stage in the opening act. A rapid set change carries us from the subterranean Venusberg to the valley beneath Wartburg Castle. From a realm that is lushly orchestrated and overflowing with intimacy and dancing, we arrive in a much simpler place in which the orchestra is silent for a stretch. The shepherd boy who sings a song to the pagan goddess of spring suggests a younger, more innocent version of Tannhäuser. As he sings, we hear the strains of a chorus, softly, as if from a distance. Wagner shaped this scene so that the shepherd is absorbed in his own singing and piping, with stage directions that indicate his becoming aware of the group of men only as they come into his and our view. With Tannhäuser immobile and also self-absorbed, we might for a few moments wonder what the disembodied sounds represent. Are there actually men singing somewhere offstage, or are we hearing something that sounds in Tannhäuser’s mind? Wagner shaped this scene so that the shepherd is absorbed in his own singing and piping, with stage directions that indicate his becoming aware of the group of men only as they come into his and our view. With Tannhäuser immobile and also self-absorbed, we might for a few moments wonder what the disembodied sounds represent. Are there actually men singing somewhere offstage, or are we hearing something that sounds in Tannhäuser’s mind? Wagner’s tendency to flirt with the boundary between reality and illusion became a hallmark of his mature dramatic style, with the invisible sailor’s song at the beginning of Tristan und Isolde obviously indebted to this scene.

For Wagner, the pilgrims were more than just a means of integrating choral music and a group of penitents into the framing acts of the opera. Reflecting on how he might evoke a sense of medieval times in musical terms, he rejected the idea of emulating music from that era. Church hymns, he decided, were the best way to engage music that bears the residue of hundreds of years of history. The pilgrims’ chorus takes on special meaning in this context, and we might note that it is the music that recurs most frequently throughout the opera.

The two groups of pilgrims are crucial to the plot. Tannhäuser responds viscerally to the first, older group, once the men are in his midst and heard at full volume, unleashing the full force of the orchestra in the process. While their plea for redemption shakes him from his semiconscious stupor, and awakens his sense of guilt for his time spent with Venus, he is not moved to join them. Rather, he becomes remote again as the pilgrims move on, until Wolfram happens to find Tannhäuser and urges him to return with him to the castle. After the song contest ends in chaos, Tannhäuser is able to join a younger group of pilgrims about to set off for Rome. We thus hear their by-now familiar chorale again at the end of the opera’s central act. With the two groups of penitents returning in close succession in Act Three, their music anchors the drama’s conclusion.

Wagner regarded the pilgrims’ music as bringing together the two sides of Tannhäuser’s deeply divided nature. Specifically, he referred to the stirring end of the overture, when pulsing, cascading gestures in the violins that are part of the Venusberg music are blended with the pilgrims’ chorale. Merging these two sound worlds might seem surprising, for it is easy to think of Venus’s realm and that of the Wartburg as oil and water, with Venus and Elisabeth as opposites. Upon closer examination, however, we can find several instances of Wagner creating links between them.

Mythology fascinated Wagner, and he knew well the penetrating studies of Jacob Grimm (one half of the famous fairytale-collector brothers). From Grimm, he would have known that Holda – the goddess of spring honored in the shepherd’s song – was tied to Venus and also had an early association with the Virgin Mary, to whom Elisabeth prays in the opera’s third act. This helps explain Wolfram’s ode to the Evening Star – Venus – as simultaneously a song worshiping Elisabeth in an idealized form. Although hard to pull off effectively, singers like Gwyneth Jones and Birgit Nilsson have sung both Venus and Elisabeth in select productions of the opera. By blurring the distinction between Venus and Elisabeth as the drama unfolds, Wagner encourages us to think of Wolfram’s ode as a counterpart to the song Tannhäuser begins to sing to Venus in the first act – the song he completes in the singing contest.

“O du, mein holder Abendstern” (“Oh you, my dear Evening Star”) is one of opera’s best-known melodies. Often sung as an excerpt, its serene tones belie the fact that it emerges out of a particularly heart-wrenching moment in the drama. When it appears (wrongly) that Tannhäuser will not return from his pilgrimage to Rome, Wolfram offers Elisabeth companionship but she utters not a single word in response before quitting the valley alone. Wolfram poetically describes her departure as a cloak of darkness covering the land, and the suggestion of mourning anticipates her imminent death. The season, we should note, is now fall, reminding us that several months have transpired since Tannhäuser set off. Wagner traces the natural cycle of the seasons to symbolically suggest the declining state of the Wartburg realm, before a miraculous sign of new growth finally redeems Tannhäuser at the opera’s close.

Wagner celebrates this transformative moment when the staff buds afresh to the sounds of the pilgrims’ chorus, fused with ecstatic figures from the Venusberg music as anticipated in the opera’s overture. In Wagner’s words, this was to suggest the “redemption of the pulse of life,” with “both separated elements – spirit and senses, God and nature – uniting in an atoning kiss of love.” At the very least, one senses that the Wartburg community is reinvigorated, and gains some hope for the future. This renewal comes at a cost. Friends of the composer expressed concern that Elisabeth and Tannhäuser both die at the drama’s end, but Wagner stuck to his original plan of foregrounding their struggles.

The situation in Dresden as Wagner completed Tannhäuser sheds light on the political hue of the network of symbols in the opera. The composer had long identified with the liberal movement to democratically unify Germany. To that end he regarded art as a potent political medium as well as a means for dealing with the hardships facing humankind. As an employee of the court, however, he needed to avoid expressing views that critiqued the monarchy. The focus on spring as a time of renewal and redemption in Tannhäuser is a fresh impulse in Wagner’s dramatic art – one that could safely extend dramatic meaning into the political sphere.

A clue to alternative readings of this nature imagery is offered by none other than Wolfram. Before the song contest begins, he addresses the men in the audience as proud, heroic oak trees, and the women as crowning blossoms. These references come soon after the Landgraf has reminded the onstage audience of those times when many of the men fought as soldiers. Wolfram’s striking description of the heroes in his midst is a political metaphor connected to artistic renderings of the allegorical female figure of Germania positioned nearby vigorous oak trees and adorned with its leaves. The oaks themselves were intended to recall times when German-speaking regions had been stronger and more independent. Such renderings became increasingly popular after the Napoleonic wars – years of French oppression that were vivid memories for many through the 1840s and beyond.

The French tyrant was finally ousted from German soil in 1813, in a great battle that took place near Leipzig – the largest engagement fought on European soil prior to World War One. Wagner was but a few months old when fighting raged close to his home. German unification, however, would take nearly six more decades to be achieved. Memorializing the events of 1813 was a way of maintaining hope in the interim. One of the notable memorial gatherings was a rally at the Wartburg in October of 1817, held on the anniversary of the battle at Leipzig. The participants all wore sprigs of oak in their caps. It is surely no coincidence that Tannhäuser premiered on the anniversary of the Battle of Leipzig when it reached the stage in nearby Dresden.

When Wagner moved to Dresden in 1842, he quickly associated himself with an array of liberal artists, many of whom, like him, would take part in the revolutionary uprising in 1849. Wilhelmine Schröder-Devrient, who created the role of Venus, was especially active politically. Wagner had idolized Schröder-Devrient as a model singer-actor ever since he first saw her performing roles such as Bellini’s Romeo and Beethoven’s Leonore. Her draw towards strong-willed characters who rebel against oppressive forces aligned with her personal vision of her artistic mission, and in turn informed Wagner’s conception of his goddess. No demure Venus was she. Elisabeth, by contrast, is more passive and dependent on others. She nevertheless performs a crucial function within the Wartburg community for she is the very reason that art exists. Her compassionate response to Tannhäuser – despite his time spent in the Venusberg – upsets the status quo. Change is in the air.

Tannhäuser appeals for a directly expressive art that draws energy from the realm of feeling. For him, Wolfram’s cautious recourse to metaphors is insufficient. If the politically-motivated Wagner was reflected through his frustrated protagonist, we might see Wolfram as standing for others who were more hesitant to voice their thoughts in precarious times. Wagner firmly believed in the rights of individuals, of everyday people, but he knew that activism involves risk. In this context, we can appreciate his sympathetic shaping of Wolfram in accordance with the drama’s political subtext. We can identify with his struggle. Wolfram’s ode to Venus/Elisabeth went viral after the opera premiered, in the form of piano-vocal versions that were performed in countless homes. For all its restraint, Wolfram’s ode hints at untapped depths of emotion, and remains a genuinely moving response to love and loss.

Katherine Syer is an associate professor of musicology and theatre at the School of Music of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. The recipient of a fellowship from the Alexander von Humboldt Stiftung, Syer served as artistic advisor for Moisés Kaufman’s play 33 Variations, seen on Broadway in 2009. Recent publications include her book, Wagner’s Visions: Poetry, Politics, and the Psyche in the Operas Through Die Walküre (University of Rochester Press, 2014).

Gene Andersen: Supporter from the Start

Gene Andersen has been involved with Lyric Opera since the very beginning: indeed, before the beginning, when the only opera Chicagoans could see was a touring group from New York sponsored by the Illinois Opera Guild. Gene’s mother was president of that guild, located at the 20 North Wacker Drive office suite, when a young Chicago native named Carol Fox decided to create a new Chicago opera company. “I have to give her a lot of credit,” Gene says. “She had the vision and the persistence to lead us through its beginnings.”

Thus begins sixty years of fond memories, exemplary productions, and unexpected side projects. “Don Giovanni was the Opening Night, and I was just married. John and I went with two other couples. The space that is now the Pedersen Room was a bar at that time, so of course we lost our men in the second act.” Gene attributes their moderate disinterest to the fact that they had limited exposure to opera but they would later learn to appreciate the art form. Gene, on the other hand, had been raised to love opera, having grown up listening alongside her mother and tagging along to Illinois Opera Guild activities. When Lyric Opera began in 1954, Gene was ready to take on a leadership role of her own. “I was chairman of the first Chapter in Oak Park/River Forest. Eventually, I got involved with the Guild Board, which at that time was set up to govern the Chapters. Later, the Chapters elected their own officials, and the Guild Board formed a separate fundraising identity. I’ve been a member ever since.”

Gene attributes many of her positive recollections to the people who were around Lyric Opera in its early years. “Everyone involved was so enthusiastic and excited that we had our own opera company. They wanted it to see it succeed, and it did. There were a lot of young people participating in those days, and the energy was incredible.” Specifically, Gene remembers one particularly energetic personality: “I enjoyed Danny Newman so much; he always had a smile on his face, and he made you feel so welcome. He would walk down the aisles before each opera and stop to visit with everybody – he really made you feel like you belonged to Lyric and that Lyric belonged to you.” Newman, of course, was the founding press agent and public relations director of Lyric, legendary for pioneering the subscription model, which revolutionized the business of selling tickets. Lyric still boasts the highest number of subscribers of any organization in the field, and although Lyric’s model is evolving along with current demands, subscription sales are still a significant part of the equation.

Through her association with Danny Newman, Lee Freeman Sr. and other Lyric friends, Gene was introduced to a young man named Sam Wanamaker, who at the time was struggling to reconstruct the historic Globe Theatre in London. “I was so enraptured by what he was doing that I wanted to be a part of it. I ended up running the project’s fundraising efforts in Chicago for nine years. I would have never had the opportunity to develop so many close friendships in London had it not been for my ties with Lyric Opera. It has been a privilege and joy to work with both these outstanding organizations.”

Gene has witnessed her fair share of excitement within the Civic Opera House. “I remember Maria Callas performing the title role in Lucia di Lammermoor. During the mad scene, unintentionally, I think, there was wind coming through an open door and it blew her gown away from her as she came down the stairs; it was very exciting. Of course Callas herself was very exciting, and it was a big coup for us to have her here in her prime.” Among Gene’s many favorite operas (“I love the Russian operas, Faust, and Mefistofele”), she recalls being particularly impressed by Philip Glass’s Satyagraha, which had the main characters and the exceptional Lyric Opera Chorus singing in Sanskrit. “I even heard a rumor that when another opera company tried to produce it, they had to hire our chorus because theirs was unable to learn the Sanskrit.”

Another of Gene’s standout moments in Lyric Opera’s rich history was the first full presentation of Wagner’s Ring cycle in 1996. “It was an incredible experience to see the whole Cycle in one week; each installment left you desperately anticipating the next. People came from all over the world to see it and it was exciting to hear all the different foreign languages spoken in the lobby.”

Of course, it wasn’t always smooth sailing. “When Ardis [Krainik] became general director, it was a different world. Several poor business decisions had been made. Ardis, along with the Board of Directors, felt strongly that we should be solvent, setting aside funds for the future. Everyone loved working with Ardis, who had a challenging job in front of her. Following good Midwest values, Lyric grew and became financially stable, which is a rarity for an opera company.

“Lyric has always been a part of me. When you start something from the beginning and watch it grow, you feel that there’s a part of you growing with it. I’ve always admired Lyric Opera’s ideals. Carol had the dream and the excitement to bring it about and Ardis had the vision and talent to financially stabilize it, creating a successful opera company. The tradition was carried on by Chicago native Bill Mason, who grew up at Lyric and knew the business inside and out. Now England has arrived with Anthony Freud, and it’s exciting because we’re doing new things and reaching further into the community, the parks and the schools. Wherever I go, I love to tell people about Lyric. I am very proud of Chicago’s culture, its international opera company, and to have been an integral part of it.”

Facilities and Services

The management of Lyric Opera of Chicago earnestly requests patrons to preserve complete silence during the performance. As a gesture of respect for all other audience members as well as for our artists onstage and in the pit, patrons are asked to remain seated until an act or the opera is completely over.

The management reserves the right to refuse admittance or remove any person who may create a disturbance. Patrons are urgently reminded to check that their cellular phones, pagers, and electronic beepers (including watches) are SWITCHED OFF before the performance begins.

Perfumes, hairsprays, colognes, and other body lotions should be avoided or used sparingly when attending the opera, as allergies are commonplace.

Noise from theater elevators may disturb patrons in the auditorium during the performance. We therefore respectfully ask that the elevators only be used before performances start.

Perfumes, hairsprays, colognes, and other body lotions should be avoided or used sparingly when attending the opera, as allergies are commonplace.
